Green Rejects Mellon Surtax Schedule

TREASURY SLASH BRANDED SCHEME OF DEFIANT RICH

Republican Chairman of House Ways and Means Committee Stands for 35 Per Cent Maximum.

SEES DOOM OF G. O. P. IN PLAN DEMANDED

Tax-Free Wealth Will Not Seek Other Investment Channels by Tax Cut, Says Solon.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, February 6.—Chairman Green, of the house ways and means committee, came out tonight in opposition to Secretary Mellon's recommendation that the present 50 per cent maximum surtax be cut in half. He has agreed, however, to vote tomorrow with other republicans on the committee to report the treasury tax bill, which contains this provision.

Mr. Green outlined his views in a letter to Dr. T. S. Adams, professor of political economy at Yale university, who had written to him on various phases of the tax problem. Although the chairman had been known to be lukewarm on the Mellon surtax schedule, he had not committed himself definitely until tonight to a maximum of at least 35 per cent. Referring to Dr. Adams' letter, Mr. Green said it contained a statement to the effect that the extremely wealthy now defy the government and intend to continue to defeat it out of its just share of their taxes.

Sees Doom of Party.

"It is unnecessary to say," he continued, "that the political party which proclaims such a doctrine will seal its doom with the announcement. You say that they will not pay and we can not make them. But Canada makes them pay a much higher tax than we have now and England makes them pay a higher tax than any which is now proposed for the new bill so far as I know—certainly very much higher than any I would advocate. If other nations can do this, what reason can we give for not doing it?"

"You say in effect that they will not pay 35 per cent, which I have advocated. I say that the man with immense wealth who will evade taxes at 35 per cent will do so at 25 per cent. In neither case has he any need for the money which he keeps from the government."

"I agree with you in your criticism of legislators who champion the extremely high surtaxes and at the same

HER HUSBY TAKEN AT PISTOL POINT IS WAIL OF WIFE

Mobile, Ala., February 6.—The sunny south, famous for its chivalry, witnessed a new type of the "eternal triangle" Wednesday, when Mrs. Mollie Saxon testified in court that Margaret Brown entered the Saxon home, held her up at the point of a revolver, and forced Jeff Saxon, her husband, to leave.

"She drew a gun on me, judge, and took my husband away," declared Mollie.

Miss Brown and Saxon were later arrested, and charges are pending against the alleged abductress and an accomplice, Mary McLaurin.

TRAGEDY, SCANDAL SWAY WASHINGTON

Death of Wilson Fatal Blow to Presidential Aspirations of Senator James Reed, of Missouri.

BY MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, February 6.—This city is about equally divided between tragedy and scandal—or rather between two kinds of tragedy, the decent, dignified tragedy of death, and the more sombre tragedy of at least one living man who must look upon Wilson's exalted end with envy.

Of this latter aspect of Washington the present writer will say much after a day or two. Every writer will be compelled, because the common belief is that some extremely unhappy developments in new fields and affecting other persons will appear very soon. But for today, one prefers to share the mood of the better part of Washington, which is to turn away from crime and scandal, even though we know they are inevitably ahead of us and must be faced, until after we have finished the formalities attending the end of one whose character was such that even the emotion of sorrow for his death, coming at the time it did, provided a welcome contrast to more sombre spectacles clamoring at our attention.

Motive of Reed.

Let us then, for today, consider a topic which, under other circumstances, would have filled the public mind as one of the leading consequences of Wilson's death, and of the simultaneous award of an immense prize and great publicity to a plan for the future foreign policy of the United States.

Before Wilson died, Senator Jim Reed, of Missouri, had announced his candidacy for the democratic presidential nomination. Certainly an incidental and probably the main purpose of that candidacy was to introduce into the next democratic national convention a resolution against the league of nations and to try to

HEART OF ATLANTA WRUNG WITH GRIEF IN FINAL TRIBUTE

Hundreds of Citizens Join in Mass Service in Memory of Former President Wilson.

DR. M. ASHBY JONES
PRINCIPAL SPEAKER

Departed War President "May Well Boast to Angels of His Record," Dr. Jones Declares.

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

The great heart of Atlanta, tense with grief and sorrow, Wednesday afternoon throbbed in unison with the nation in a final tribute to the memory of Woodrow Wilson, at the moment when his body was lowered into the marble crypt of the Cathedral of Saints Peter and Paul, in Washington. Official Atlanta and the public generally, state and county governments, courts and council and churches—all Atlanta, in short—combined in a touching expression of sorrow and tribute, of grief and eulogy, to the departed leader, in a simple but impressive memorial service at the city auditorium.

Surging over the immense audience gathered to honor an immortal leader came the sweet and solemn notes of "America." For a moment the sun was hid behind a cloud and a mystic gloom pervaded the great assembly room. Then at the moment when the music thundered the words of the chorus of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," the pall was dispelled, the light streamed through the windows above and threw a patchwork of light and gold on the thousands of upturned faces.

Universe in Homage.

It was as if the universe paid its homage with a brilliance of sunlight at that moment when waves of melody rose upward proclaiming that ideal of freedom which Woodrow Wilson was the champion, and of which Woodrow Wilson was the victim.

Although the occasion was marked with solemn dignity the service was desired to show this courtesy to the late ex-president, there is nothing the government can do officially. However, the very fact that the matter has created feeling here is sufficient to make it difficult for the German ambassador to continue his work of cultivating friendly relations, and his early recall is the natural sequel.

The flag was run up over the German embassy two being before the Wilson funeral began. Other embassies and legations have flown their flags at half mast since the announcement of the death Sunday.

A group of indignant citizens gathered in front of the embassy early in the afternoon to watch, and demand the raising of the flag, if it was not done voluntarily. When the flag was finally run up the mast, the little knot of people in the street cheered and dispersed under the flexible provisions of the law permitting a change within a maximum of 50 per cent of the rates carried in the law in order to obtain raw materials cheaper. Those interests opposed to the change claimed to speak for agricultural producers, such as cotton growers, who asserted that any reduction would tend to injure the sale of cotton seed, an important by-product.

Some agricultural groups, however, were on the other side. Flaxseed growers have called repeatedly for a high duty on linseed oil, while sharp lines have been drawn between producing and consuming interests in some other lines supplying basic materials for oils.

In some quarters the belief was expressed tonight that the tariff commission, made up of six members who have been divided three and three on many questions, had become deadlocked again and that the president had broken the impasse by directing the investigation of the rates. Members of the commission declined to discuss the question.

Vegetable Oil Tariffs Probe Starts in March

President Coolidge Orders Commission To Hold Public Hearings.

Washington, February 6.—President Coolidge has directed the tariff commission to proceed with an investigation of the entire vegetable oil tariff schedule. March 7 has been fixed for the preliminary public hearing on the question.

Applications for an inquiry into the vegetable oil duties have been pending before the commission nearly six months, but an investigation has been opposed from half a dozen sources. Members of the commission apparently have been in disagreement concerning an investigation, but whether the instructions from the president, which were made known today, resulted from an appeal by commission members was not disclosed.

The effort to obtain a review of the rates was started by consuming interests, including several large soap manufacturers. They urged revision downward under the flexible provisions of the law permitting a change within a maximum of 50 per cent of the rates carried in the law in order to obtain raw materials cheaper. Those interests opposed to the change claimed to speak for agricultural producers, such as cotton growers, who asserted that any reduction would tend to injure the sale of cotton seed, an important by-product.

"Devils in Tanks" Frighten Yet Allure Fated Chinaman

EXPERIMENT IN DEATH COMES "TOMORROW"

Carson City, Nev., February 6.—"When I go gas room? Tomorrow? Tomorrow?"

Ge Jon, condemned Chinese murderer, puts this question daily to the workmen and guards who hurry past his cell, engaged in the serious business of making ready two chambers of death for Ge Jon and Thomas Russell, a Mexican.

Jon is worried. The uncertainty of the fate which awaits him—he and Russell will be the first men ever to be executed in Nevada's new lethal gas chamber—coupled with the uncertainty of the time when he will face the great adventure, have crouched in him a shaky, nervous but eagerly burning curiosity.

Russell, the stoical Mexican, appears more resigned. His eyes ask the same question Jon asks with quivering lips, and the answer he obtains is the same:

"Tomorrow," say the guards.

Ge Jon is more stoical than Russell, in one respect, however.

The Chinese apparently has placed his faith in the gods of his ancestors, but Russell several days ago pitifully pleaded for a priest and since that time has been poring over a Bible and muttering prayers which he had long since forgotten.

Ge Jon would rather be shot or hanged than gassed. He doesn't like the idea of being shut up in that little steel room "with devils coming out of tanks."

Russell, still maintaining that he never knifed to death Mamie Johnnie, his Indian sweetheart, is ready.

"Any old way suits me; but make it snappy," he said to the men who stop for a word with him as they hurry past.

While Ge Jon waits and wonders and Russell reads still more words of comfort from his Bible, preparations go on apace for the "experiment in death" Friday morning.

One thing only is worrying Warden Denver Dickerson.

"The thought behind this law calling for a gas execution is that it is merciful for the men not to know when death is about to reach out for them," he said. "But the uncertainty as to the time seems to be giving these men no peace."

GERMAN MINISTER MAY GET RECALL FIGHT ON BEAVERS MAY BE RENEWED

Washington Seethes With Feeling Over Action of Ambassador in Refusing To Half-Mast Flag.

Washington, February 6.—Recall of the German ambassador, Otto Wiedfeldt, as a result of his refusal to place the embassy flag at half mast until criticism here forced him to, is generally expected.

Unofficial advice from Berlin indicated that this is probable, and the feeling is general in official circles here that the ambassador has ended his usefulness here by this affront to the memory of a dead president.

The state department omitted sending him an invitation to the funeral services at Bethlehem chapel, and he was, therefore, missing from the diplomatic corps which was present in full attendance, with this exception.

It is not likely that the state department will take any other cognizance of the incident, much as it is deplored. The German embassy in Germany territory, and it was not desired to show this courtesy to the late ex-president, there is nothing the government can do officially. However, the very fact that the matter has created feeling here is sufficient to make it difficult for the German ambassador to continue his work of cultivating friendly relations, and his early recall is the natural sequel.

Coolidge Asked To Stop Hikes In Price of Gas

Governor McMaster Urges Action by Federal Government.

Pierre, S. D., February 6.—Governor W. H. McMaster today wired President Coolidge asking the executive to take some action to stop the rising price of gasoline. The governor declared the cornering of the crude oil market by the large oil interests has taken the fight outside of the state of South Dakota, where it was originally begun on August 7, 1923.

New Orleans, February 6.—The local distributing plant of the Victory Oil company, just outside the city limits in St. Bernard parish, was destroyed by fire today with a loss of approximately $100,000, which officials said was fully covered by insurance.

SECRETARY DENBY DEFENDS LEASING OF U. S. OIL LANDS

Declares Rental of Production Rights Saved Millions of Gallons of Fuel to Government.

GIVES 3 REASONS
FOR ACTION TAKEN

Telegram of Explanation Asserts Policy of Leasing Was Obedient to Will of Congress.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, February 6.—On the eve of the renewal in the senate of the demand for his removal from the cabinet, Secretary Denby made public tonight an extended statement explaining and defending his course in assenting to the lease of the naval oil reserves.

Asserting that there are involved three basic questions the naval secretary answered them all in the affirmative; that the transfer of administration from his department to the interior department was legal; that the leases themselves were legal and carried out the expressed will of congress; that they were beneficial to the government, preventing the further loss of millions of dollars' worth of oil and greatly increasing the power of the navy to defend the country.

With the senate and its oil committee both in recess, Mr. Denby's statement was the only concrete development of the day in the oil situation. Debate in the senate will break out afresh tomorrow and the committee will get back to its hearings on Friday.

End Not in Sight.

With new leads developing in apparently unending succession, the end of the senate inquiry seems to be nowhere in sight. Many witnesses, prominent in political and business life, are yet to be examined, and there is no telling now how many others will be called after expert accountants have gone through the books of stock brokerage firms, banks and quasi-business associations in search of transactions in any way related to the oil leases.

After the senate has renewed the authority of the committee to meet one of the objections raised by Albert B. Fall, central figure in the oil muddle, in his refusal to testify, it will plunge into the fight over the resolution by Democratic Leader Robinson, calling for Mr. Denby's resignation.

The navy secretary made no mention of this resolution in his statement tonight, which was in the form of a telegram to Roy D. Chapin, of Detroit, in reply to the message of confidence received some days ago from 225 citizens of Michigan.

Stating that he had received hundreds of letters and telegrams from Michigan and all parts of the union, Mr. Denby declared that "such a demonstration of faith requires that I shall give you the reasons why that faith is not misplaced."

"When I came into office," his message continued on page 5, column 6.

Negro's Efforts To Escape Death Are Unavailing

Court Rules He'll Be Executed, Despite Jury's Verdict to Hang.

Austin, Texas, February 6.—Efforts of Melvin Johnson, negro of Liberty county, awaiting electrocution at the Huntsville penitentiary, to escape the death penalty because the jury decreed he should hang while his sentence calls for electrocution, failed today when the court of criminal appeals refused his application for a writ of habeas corpus.

The phrase "hanged until dead," which was part of all death verdicts in Texas prior to the institution of the electric chair, is mere surplusage; the court held, adding that the right to determine the method of execution is not within the scope of the jury's authority. The change from hanging to electrocution, effected after the man was sentenced, did not offend against the constitutional provision prohibiting ex-post facto legislation, the court held.

2 KILLED WHEN CAR IS STRUCK BY TRAIN

Water Valley, Miss., February 6.—Dr. C. G. Coleman, county health officer of Yalobusha county, and James Pittman, a farmer, were killed when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by a passenger train at a crossing near here today.

POISON BEAN TOLL REACHES 11; BABE ONLY SURVIVOR

Albany, Ore., February 6.—Albany's poison bean tragedy claimed three more victims Wednesday. Eleven persons of a dozen who ate home-canned beans at a family dinner here Saturday have succumbed to botulinus poisoning.

Two families have been completely wiped out, while Horst Rubing, aged 2, believed safely recovered, is the sole survivor of a third family.

The victims were Mr. and Mrs. Paul Gerbig and their four children, Mr. and Mrs. Godfried Rubing, Mr. and Mrs. Reinhold Gerber and Werner Yunker.

A joint funeral for the eleven will be held here Thursday.

10 PERSONS HURT IN AUTO CRASHES

Collisions Are Big Factors in List of Accidents Which Occurred Wednesday.

Ten persons were hurt during Wednesday in a number of automobile accidents. Four of the injured are suffering from serious cuts and bruises and five others were only slightly hurt.

Collisions played the major part in contributing to the list of injured, while careless driving in busy sections took its usual heavy toll, according to police.

T. A. Landrum, of 243 West Third street, one of those seriously hurt, was the victim of a collision between the automobile he was driving and a jitney bus operated by T. E. Guthrie, 29 Milledge avenue. Landrum is at home under care of a physician, having requested the police not to take him to the hospital.

Jitney in Crash.

The collision occurred about 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at Washington and Fair streets, and was caused. Call Officers Fred L. Tippen and M. C. Williams were told, when the speeding jitney crashed into Landrum's car. Guthrie was arrested under a charge of reckless driving. He is said to have been severely shaken up and cut by flying glass.

Miss Lorene Spivey, 138 Kirkwood avenue, was slightly injured early Wednesday night when she was struck down by an automobile driven by S. J. Cole, Jr., at Five Points. According to police reports, Miss Spivey was standing on the edge of the sidewalk at the Fourth National Bank building, and her dress caught in the car which was passing close to the curb. She was knocked down and bruised but refused to be taken to the hospital. Miss Spivey declined to prefer charges against Cole.

Another victim seriously hurt is J.

GANDHI RELEASE MAY STIR STRIFE

Anti-British Faction in India Shows Teeth as Prisoned Leader Is Given Freedom.

Delhi, February 6.—Mahatma Mohandas Gandhi will resume his activities as leader of the non-cooperation movement in six weeks, according to friends here.

Gandhi's release from prison and his re-entrance into the nationalist struggle may create new difficulties in India.

Motilal Nehru, wealthy Bombay lawyer, who is leading the swarajist or home rule advocates who hope to obtain their ends by obstructionist tactics, is now carrying on an active campaign in the Indian assembly. Gandhi, whose policy has been to secure freedom for India by means of boycotting the British rule, must re-unite his party in the face of this new force. Many believe that the groups will clash.

Nehru seeks recruits. The assembly pledged to the obstructionist campaign, and needs 12 more to defeat the government. He is making every effort to add to his group before Gandhi enters the field, for it is expected that Gandhi will demand that his followers resign their seats in the assembly and resume the boycott campaign.

VETERANS BEAR BIER OF DEAD COMMANDER

Sorrowing Thousands Stand Hushed in Dripping Rain as Soundless Funeral Passes By.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, February 6.—A bugle calling softly in the fading light, told that Woodrow Wilson had passed down "The Way of Peace" to his earned and honored rest.

It sang the same soldier requiem that once before, at the lips of the same loyal comrade, it sang to lull America's Unknown to his sleep in glory.

And as the bugle called late Wednesday afternoon, out over the hills that look down on the city, a stricken woman turned away from the entrance of the stone crypt down in the dim chapel, leaving her dead to the mercy of God.

At the end, there still stood beside the vault one staunch friend of the dead president, a friend who had battled death for him to the bitter end, who had shared in the great days of triumph, the bitter days of disappointment even as now he stood to render the last loyal service. Not until the great slab of stone had been swung back to close the vault did Dr. Grayson end the vigil he has kept with Woodrow Wilson for more than a half score of years.

Only Her Flowers.

Tonight the somber casket of black steel lies in the western niche of the great vault below Bethlehem chapel. Above, towering from the hillside, looms the gray mass of the cathedral. Below the lights of the city that has turned back from its day of sorrow to the crowding cares of life twinkle through the dark of an overcast night.

And on that casket, where the great dead lies alone at last, for his endless rest, beside the plate that set forth only his name and the date of his birth and death, there still lies the handful of soft hued blossoms that were the last touching gift of the grief worn widow.

Distant rumbling of saluting guns in the cloud darkened dawn ushered in the day when the nation would pay to Woodrow Wilson the simple tribute that he had claimed of it. The busy life of the capital surged on for a few hours before its course was checked in the last moments of silent respect for the dead. But to the door of the stricken home and into the dim chapel where the last rites would be paid poured an endless stream of flowers that banked and overflowed every space with tender beauty. The names of kings and the great of the earth were on these tributes, and the names of loyal, humble friends and comrades.

C. F. VAN HERNIMANN, Meteorologist, Weather Bureau.

A fellow down at Macon stated under oath that he hadn't worked in thirty years—said he didn't have to. Lucky dog!

Just the same, when night comes he is thoroughly worn out.

Would you send a salesman to see a client late in the afternoon, providing he could go during the morning hours?

Are you, yourself, in a buying mood late in the afternoon— isn't it a poor time to strike you?

Would you send a house-to-house demonstrator along about the shank of the day to talk to the women of the households in Atlanta? If such a demonstrator got his foot in the crack of the door he would be in luck.

After a woman has struggled all day long with household affairs she is entitled to a rest—and she takes it.

Why make it hard on your advertising? Why expect it to do something that is contrary to general rules of life?

Before six o'clock in the morning, The Constitution is delivered by carrier into every worth-while home in Atlanta.

After a good night's rest the mind is clear and in a receptive mood. It is the best time to accomplish sales.

It's the Little Things in Life That Count

To the Managers of Rogers' Stores:

We are wondering as we look over our tremendous stock of pure food products out here in our big warehouse, if all of you store managers are carrying full and complete stocks of the many and varied household articles which are here for you—and for your trade. We are assuming that you do. Certainly we want you to, if you are not.

Many of these are small, insignificant appearing articles, it is true,—articles, too, on which the margin of profit is limited—but we want you to have them in your store as a matter of convenience for your trade. This is one of the big features of a Rogers' store—SERVICE TO THE LIMIT FOR OUR PATRONS.

Of course, people generally think of a grocery store as a place where things to eat are provided—and in the case of a Rogers' store, largely a place where only GOOD things to eat are provided.

But Rogers' stores do more than that. So often it is that many little household necessities are needed by the family around the corner—and sometimes needed in a hurry—a spool of thread, a lamp chimney or wick, a candle or an oil can, a little turpentine or castor oil, or a broom or a pail or a tub—that these things have all been added from time to time, until now hardly a want of this kind can be mentioned that cannot be filled at a Rogers' store—provided you are keeping your stock right up to the minute.

It is possible that many people do not know we carry all these little things in our nearly 200 Pure Food stores. They overlook the fact that Rogers realizes that it is "the little things in life that count," and that we are carrying these hundred-and-one little household necessities in order to provide for our friends and patrons the fullest measure of convenience.

As I think over these things and begin to write about them, it occurs to me that maybe the public would be interested to know that—

There's hundreds of things you sell in your store—Convenient things for the rich and the poor—Things needed in homes—things used every day—Things sold at low prices—our usual way.

There's MATCHES, for instance, there's dandy TOOTH PICKS, There's CHIMNEYS for lamps, and BURNERS and WICKS, There's KEROSENE OIL and CANDLES galore, And CANS for the oil to be found at each store.

There's POLISH for silver, for stove, and for shoe, And POLISH to make your old furniture new; There's BROOMS and there's MOPS for those who would scrub, There's PAILS for the water—even better, a TUB.

And then for the scrubbing you'll need very much Some OCTAGON cakes or a can of OLD DUTCH; Then a bath for the hands—or a plunge wouldn't hurt—There's fine TOILET SOAP, which takes off the dirt.

A cough or a cold—sometimes stomach ache—Needs help in a hurry—no chance you can take—So we sell TURPENTINE, because we are told With our VASELINE mixed it is fine for a cold.

There's ASPIRIN, too, it's Bayer's—the best—It will cure many ills—but for all the rest Of the pains and the aches we've got CASTOR OIL—It'll help anything from a mole to a boil.

There's WASHBOARDS and WAX (paraffine), or for floor, There's BORAX and BLUING and SULPHUR galore; There's PARSON'S AMMONIA—the best you can buy—And for those who desire it, there's cans full of LYE.

When aluminum needs a cleaning up bright, There's S.O.S., fellows, it'll do the job right; There's DUSTERS that's good—they make the dust fly—And SHOPPING BAGS handy—tote home what you buy.

There's BASKETS—all good ones—and please bear in mind There's FEED for the CHICKENS—the feathery kind; There's OPENERS for CANS—there's INSECTICIDE, There's HAIR NETS, all colors, for matron or bride.

There's STARCH of all kinds—mighty good as a rule—There's PENCILS and TABLETS for children in school; And when buttons come off—our buddy's breeches are "tore," There's THREAD in all sizes in most every store.

And then for the "dippers"—and we've said most enough—There's oodles and oodles of old-fashioned SNUFF; There's SMOKING TOBACCO for the youth and his pa, And all kinds of CHEWIN' for those who would "chaw."

In fact, my dear managers, we've got a whole score Of things you won't find in the average store; Tell the public about 'em—we want them to know it—Our PRICES ARE RIGHT—the list here will show it.

Assuring you there's more truth than poetry in the above,

I remain below,

ILLNESS OF TAFT IS NOT SERIOUS

Washington, February 6.—Chief Justice Taft, by direction of his physician, Dr. Thomas A. Clayton, has canceled all engagements for the immediate future and entered upon a period of complete rest. This course was determined upon after the chief justice had suffered an attack of indigestion today. Although the attack was yielding to treatment he followed his physician's instructions and went to bed.

Because of his illness Mr. Taft was unable to attend the funeral of Woodrow Wilson, for which he had been named an honorary pall-bearer. At the same time he decided to abandon a trip to New York and New Haven which he had planned for tomorrow.

Although the supreme court is in a three weeks' recess, he had been working intensely, preparing opinions for delivery upon the resumption of the court February 18. It is believed too close application to this duty is responsible in part for his condition. Dr. Clayton said tonight he did not consider that Mr. Taft was seriously ill and added that it probably would not be necessary for him to remain in bed.

"The chief justice had a little gastric indigestion," Dr. Clayton stated, "but he has no fever and will be fully restored to his usual good health in a day or two. I do not consider him seriously ill. He was resting very comfortably tonight. I have advised him to remain quietly at home for a day or two where he will be permitted to go about the house. His condition is not such as to require him to remain in bed."

Chief Justice Taft has kept himself in condition by methodical exercise since leaving the white house. Even during the winter months he has daily walked the three or four miles between his residence and the capitol at a brisk pace. He has been generally regarded as enjoying excellent health.

FEARING INSANITY NOTED INVENTOR COMMITS SUICIDE

Camden, N. J., February 6.—Professor E. J. Christie, of Marion, Iowa, inventor of a gyroscopic unicycle, which he hoped could attain a speed of 250 miles an hour, committed suicide in a hotel here today.

Christie's body was found on the floor fully dressed with a pistol in his hand. On the bureau was a note addressed to Coroner Robert G. Schroeder, of Camden, which read:

"I have taken my own life because I would rather die now than spend the rest of my life in an insane asylum. Kindly prepare my body and notify my brother, Hon. John T. Christie, Marion, Iowa."

In his pocket was found a Philadelphia newspaper clipping describing his work on the gyroscopic unicycle in a workshop in Philadelphia.

Mr. Christie was about 38 years old. On his arrival here more than a year ago, Professor Christie said that if his expectations came true, models of transportation would be completely changed by the principle of his gyroscopic unicycle.

His design, he pointed out, was simply a matter of a bicycle wheel, with an exceptionally wide axle to the ends in which the supporting spokes were fastened. He was positive that a 14-foot model he had under construction would develop a speed of at least 250 miles an hour and predicted it would eventually go to 400 miles an hour.

W. Crockett, of 1 North McMillan street, who lies in the Davis-Fischer hospital, with several fractured ribs, besides other severe bruises and lacerations.

Crockett was injured early Wednesday morning when his jitney, in which he was a passenger, crashed into a sedan driven by J. E. Odum, manager of the Dahl company, at Hemphill avenue and Fourteenth street. He was given first-aid treatment at Grady hospital and was later transferred to Davis-Fischer sanitarium.

The jitney, a Luckie street line machine, was operated by Fred Askew. According to statements by Mr. Odum, he was traveling at a moderate rate of speed and had the right of way across Hemphill avenue, when Askew's jitney, declared to have been traveling at a high rate of speed, crashed into the rear of his car and demolished both machines.

Mr. Odum received painful injuries about the head and face in addition to a dislocated knee and badly bruised chest resulting from a blow from the steering gear. He was confined to his bed under order of physicians.

Askew suffered minor injuries. Both Askew and Mr. Odum were charged with reckless driving pending an investigation of the accident.

Leo Simpson and David Watt, negroes, were injured Wednesday afternoon when the automobile in which they were riding "balked" and struck a tree just off Strickland street. Simpson was driving the machine, it was claimed.

Simpson's leg was broken, besides other cuts about the body, while Watt escaped with a badly lacerated leg and bruises about the head.

Negro Girl Hurt. Katie Tiller, 10-year-old negro girl, had her leg broken at Houston street and Boulevard about noon Wednesday, when knocked down by an automobile driven by S. A. Peters, negro physician, who stopped his car and rushed the girl to Grady hospital.

Another victim was Cora Russell, negro woman, who was knocked down at Whitehall street and Trinity avenue, early Wednesday morning.

P. H. Wingard of 127 Spring street, driver of the machine that injured her, was arrested by the police under a charge of reckless driving.

One Is Shocked.

J. C. Byrd, of 94 Richardson, was the victim of an electric shock early Wednesday morning when the steam derrick on which he was riding came in contact with a trolley wire on DeCATUR street. The driver of the derrick, J. W. West, of 289 South Pryor street, was unharmed by the current.

According to the report filed at police headquarters, the injury was caused by the derrick's contact with the trolley line, breaking it down and causing it to blaze. This happened about 3 o'clock between Fitzgerald street and Boulevard on DeCATUR street.

Robertson Arrested.

Florence, Ala., February 6.—Bayne Robertson of Hargis county, Tennessee, charged with slaying his wife with a pocket knife, was arrested late yesterday afternoon and lodged in the Savannah, Tenn., jail according to reports received here. He was arrested in a bank at Savannah where he had gone to draw out funds. His wife, from whom he was separated, was slain in the presence of 1 or 2 children, according to officers.

Mother of Five Held as Leader Of Bandit Band

New York, February 6.—Mrs. Mary Cody, 24 years old, blond, bobbed hair and attractive and mother of five children, was arrested today on suspicion of being the bobbed-haired girl who had led a score of Brooklyn bandit raids in the past few weeks.

Mrs. Cody and two men, roomers in her Brooklyn flat, and the supposed members of her wolf pack band, were taken in a raid. The police said they found in the apartment a sealskin coat and a strikingly-colored turban corresponding to the description given by hold-up victims as the garment and hat worn by the "bobbed-haired bandit" in leading her depredations.

The two men, Richard Gibbons and Matthew Boyd, were charged with assault and robbery. Gibbons, the police said, admitted a recent hold-up, but denied that Mrs. Cody was concerned. Mrs. Cody, who is separated from her husband and whose five children are in institutions, also denied she was the widely-sought woman bandit.

RADIO SENDS NEWS WHEN WIRES FAIL

New York, February 6.—Wide-spread prostration of telegraph and telephone wires in the middle west and elsewhere as the result of severe storms necessitated today an unusual routing of the vast wire service of The Associated Press in order to furnish its newspapers with the world's news.

Chicago has been cut off from direct communication with New York since Monday night and news has been sent circuitously through Canada to Winnipeg, from which place it has been relayed to St. Paul and thence to Chicago. Pacific coast points have been reached through St. Louis, Denver and points in the dominion.

Atlanta, ordinarily on circuits out of Chicago, was "hooked up" with New York. Today the usual routine of news was interrupted when the operator at Atlanta "broke" to say "it's snowing here. I've never seen it snow before. I want to go out and get a handful of it."

While wires were being readjusted the operator went out and took a bite! Many points radiating from Chicago have been completely isolated through loss of telephone and telegraph wires.

Throughout the entire storm, since Monday night, The Associated Press has had to maintain connection with Chicago through a solitary line from St. Paul. The east, to reach Chicago, had to route dispatches from New York to Atlanta, which relayed them to St. Louis. The Missouri city relayed them to Denver and the Colorado city routed the dispatches back to St. Paul. Service also was possible by way of the Canadian press, through Montreal and Winnipeg, to St. Paul and thence to Chicago.

At 7 o'clock this morning the one line between St. Paul and Chicago went down, leaving Chicago in complete telegraph isolation for several hours. The Associated Press maintained its service, however, by wireless, sending dispatches from New York to the St. Louis Post-Dispatch station, KSD, which relayed them to WDAP, the Chicago Board of Trade station. Chicago and middle western news was exchanged for the eastern dispatches over the same wireless routes.

The United States government also helped to the transmission of The Associated Press news. Through permission of the postmaster general, the coast to coast wireless service maintained by the air mail was used, dispatches going to and from Hazelhurst Field, Hempstead Long Island, to the Great Lakes naval station, Chicago.

Although more snow is forecast for today, the blizzard's force is ebbing as it moves slowly eastward. Railroads, telegraph and telephone companies are hopeful of improving conditions that have virtually isolated many points in the storm area, although some time will elapse before train schedules will be normal and complete wire service restored.

Radio continues to be Chicago's chief means of communication. News, market reports, train bulletins and orders have been broadcast to and from the city. Towns where telegraph and telephone service had been prostrated were kept in touch with world events through messages in the air.

The Associated Press, whose Chicago office was most vitally affected by the breakdown of wire service, was able to supply news virtually to every paper in its membership. Points not supplied with radio receiving facilities received their news dispatches by commercial wire and telephone service.

Three deaths in Milwaukee resulted from exhaustion in combating the force of the blizzard. Two Chicago children, coating, were struck and killed by an automobile. Blinding snow caused three persons in Michigan to die from injuries resulting from collisions. At Rockford, Ill., a girl is believed to have perished in the storm while on an errand. Three were killed in Alabama, the southern edge of the storm area, during a cyclone.

Milk famines in several cities are being faced today because snow blocked roads prevented dairymen from transporting their supplies. Only one-fifth of Milwaukee's normal supply was brought in yesterday. Rockford, Ill., was left virtually without a supply yesterday.

With Lover's Aid
Woman Throws
Husband in Well

St. Louis, February 6.—Mrs. Dora Snell, 32 years old, the mother of five children, confessed today to police here today, that she and Ora Thole, 42, had conspired to murder her husband, Peter, a farmer living near St. Charles, Mo. Snell was found last Thursday struggling in a well containing 14 feet of water by his brother, Joe, who was attracted to the well by cries for assistance.

Mrs. Snell told police that Thole, armed with a club, waited for more than an hour for Snell to emerge from his home. Three times she asserts, she attempted to lure him from the house. When he emerged, she said, Thole struck him over the head twice with a club. Then she and Thole carried the unconscious man to the well and tossed him in. They took a pole, she said, and pushed him under the water but "he kept coming up." They finally left the well when the man who was revived by the cold water began struggling, she said.

Mrs. Snell and Thole are in the local jail.

J. S. McCLELLAND
TO OPPOSE DORSEY
FOR SOLICITOR

John S. McClelland, prominent Atlanta attorney, Wednesday announced that he is a candidate for the position of solicitor of the criminal court of Atlanta. He expressed opposition to the fee system and said he would fill the office at an annual salary of $7,500.

Mr. McClelland was a candidate for solicitor four years ago when the incumbent, Roy Dorsey, was elected. Mr. Dorsey is seeking re-election. Belief that the salary system would mean a saving of $50,000 to Fulton county in the solicitor's office alone was expressed by Mr. McClelland. Assistants under him would be paid salaries fixed by the county commission, he stated, or, if the fixing of the salaries is held to be beyond jurisdiction of the county board, assistants would be paid reasonable salaries in proportion to the importance of their work, it was pointed out.

Mayor Pro Tempore
Takes Over Duties
Of City's Executive

Directing the city's official participation in the Woodrow Wilson memorial exercises and signing checks constituted the burden of "Mayor" I. N. Ragsdale's first day in the executive chair since his election as mayor pro tempore by council last month. Mayor Walter A. Sims is in Washington with other Atlantans seeking allocation to Atlanta of an additional national guard unit. Alderman Ragsdale is not new to the mayoralty, however, as he has been mayor pro tem before and served for several weeks as chief executive of the city during the late Mayor Woodward's administration.

HOW TO GET RID OF CATARRH

A Simple, Safe, Inexpensive Method that Clears Out the Head, Nose and Throat.

There is no disease more offensive or disagreeable, or no disease that will lead to as much serious trouble as catarrh. You can now get rid of it by a simple, safe, pleasant home remedy discovered by Dr. Blosser, a catarrh specialist.

Dr. Blosser's Remedy is composed of medicinal herbs, flowers and berries, which you smoke in a dainty pipe or cigarette. The smoke-vapor is inhaled into all the air passages of the head, nose, throat and lungs and the medicine where sprays, douches and salves cannot possibly reach. Its effect is soothing and healing and is entirely harmless. It contains no cubes or tobacco, and may be used by women and children, as well as men.

put the democratic party on record in a position directly opposite to Wilson's. It was part of that campaign of vindication Reed had carried on with some success ever since Wilson and the friends of Wilson in Missouri humiliated him because of his opposition to Wilson four years ago.

Death Cuts Chances.

The curious fact is that with Wilson gone this effort of Reed's to vindicate himself by making the democratic party renounce itself has some what less chance than it would have had with Wilson living. Wilson, with his clear conception of principle as compared with expediency, and with his covetous distaste for compromise, stood to the end and would have continued to stand to any future and for his original principle.

In a fight between these two extremes Reed might have made some headway. But with Wilson gone, the fight will not be between extremes. With Wilson gone those democratic leaders who believe strongly in international cooperation, but at the same time do not go so far as Wilson did, will feel free to formulate and support a modified proposal of democratic party policy in this field. Before Wilson's death they feared to do so. One of them once said to the writer: "I should like to propose a variation of the Wilsonian policy, but I am afraid Wilson might not like it."

Now, practically all the other democratic leaders will unite against Reed and will probably be able to agree among themselves on a new declaration of democratic party policy that shall take account of what has happened since the Paris peace conference.

McAdoo's Position.

Among these leaders, McAdoo was never for the league to the same degree that Wilson was. There is one reason why it was always a grudging consent of malice to talk of McAdoo as if he were being put forward by Wilson as his heir apparent. McAdoo's position four years ago was that he should join the league with reservations. Indeed, McAdoo, as he revealed in his mind to his friends, had in mind one reservation greater than all the others. He thought we should join the league, and at the very moment we joined it serve notice of our intention to withdraw at the end of the two years' period provided in the league constitution. McAdoo's notion was that this would put the other members of the league on notice and give us two years of trial, at the end of which we could go on with the league if it seemed good, or withdraw if it did not.

That was McAdoo's position four years ago, although he could not well take it publicly.

McAdoo's present position about Europe, of course, takes account of changed conditions. He has never made it public, but it is clear that Wilson's death has made him feel that he must make a foreign policy that would enlist the support of the moderate bulk of his party.

Underwood Policy Unformulated.

Senator Underwood believes in an affirmative policy toward Europe, but has never formulated it. Apparently he does not regard it as necessary for the democrats to formulate anything very definite in the coming campaign. He takes the position that America suffers from the present economic condition of Europe; that the present plight of the wheat farmers in the west is due to Europe's inability to buy; that Europe's economic prostration is a condition that American business which the republicans, being in power, ought to have taken account of but did not. In short, Underwood's position is that the republican party, being in power, was responsible for our own domestic business interests as affected by Europe and ought to have acted, but failed to do so. On this point Underwood would put the republican party on the defensive.

More than either McAdoo or Underwood, Governor Cox of Ohio has his heart in the issue of international cooperation. At this time he is far from favoring the league of nations, but he believes firmly in the underlying principle that international cooperation is the only means of bringing about closer economic unity or durable peace, and that both these latter are threatened in the immediate future unless international cooperation is achieved.

time favor tax-free bonds, but here again I make the statement that a reduction from 35 per cent to 25 per cent as the maximum surtax will have little effect on the investments of the extremely wealthy in tax-free securities, and it will still be largely to their advantage to invest in them. It would require a still lower rate to make them unattractive to the multi-millionaires.

Also, no matter how low the maximum surtax is there will be the same amount of tax-exempt securities in circulation and the same amount withdrawn from active business for investment therein, and about the same amount in taxes lost to the government. The fact is that while the government has lost much by the tax-exempt securities, it has not lost so much in the extreme upper brackets of the income tax from this cause as it has from the division of the estates which, unless checked, will continue just as much at 25 per cent as at 35 per cent or 40 per cent.

Insures Floor Battle.

The announcement of Mr. Green as to his stand on surtaxes, and the decision today of democrats on the ways and means committee to stand pat on their demand that the surtax maximum be reduced no lower than 44 per cent on incomes in excess of $92,000 insures a lively fight on the floor when a vote comes on this phase of the tax bill. Mr. Green and other republican members of the committee out of sympathy with Mr. Mellon or one or more provisions of the bill, have reserved the right, after voting to report it, to swing away from the administration position during consideration of the measure by the house.

A meeting of the ways and means committee has been called for tomorrow for the express purpose of voting to report the bill. Immediately after the session, committee members will hurry to the floor to take part in the fight that will develop tomorrow with the calling up of the resolution proposing a constitutional amendment to prohibit issuance of tax-exempt securities. Eight hours will be allotted for general debate, with a vote probable Friday. A two thirds vote is needed for passage.

ARGUMENTS START IN CLEVELAND CASE

Mobile, Ala., February 6.—The testimony in the case of Thomas W. Cleveland, charged with the killing of Stephen Lossing, Jr., a merchant of this county on August 24, last, was concluded here late today. Arguments will open tomorrow and it is expected that the case will reach the jury some time tomorrow afternoon. This is the third trial of the defendant, the jury being out on the second day of the hearing. A hatchet found near the Lossing home was the new evidence introduced in the case. The indictment against Cleveland charges that Lossing met his death by either a gunshot wound, baseball bat, spade or a blunt instrument. The court room has been crowded throughout the hearing.

FIRE LOSS $200,000.

Hundreds Flee From Homes When Flames Threaten.

Detroit, Mich., February 6.—Fire of unknown origin early this morning destroyed the five-story brick plant of the Mazer Cigar Manufacturing company here. Several hundred men and women employed at the plant left the building shortly before the fire was discovered. The flames gained considerable headway before being controlled and more than two hours to bring under control. Five alarms brought fire apparatus from the downtown districts to the scene. The factory is surrounded by frame buildings used as dwellings and hundreds of persons fled from their homes.

The building was destroyed with a loss estimated at more than $200,000.

by order of the British law government, is still in a weakened condition, but is as determined as ever to carry on his work.

Oliver Urged Release.

It is learned that Gandhi owes his release to Sir Sydney Oliver, secretary for India, in the MacDonald government. The Indian government originally planned to transfer the imprisoned nationalist leader to the seashore, due to the fact that his health was suffering in prison. The step was delayed while officials consulted the MacDonald government. It was then that Sir Sydney urged the unconditional release of Gandhi, and won his point.

When Gandhi was imprisoned on charges of sedition two years ago his non-cooperative campaign had and a tremendous effect throughout India. The nation has been quiet throughout the period of his imprisonment, but the announcement that he is to be released suggests potential future strife, at least between factions of the nationalist movement.

JUDGE SUSPECTS DINES IS FAKING

Los Angeles, February 6.—Anonymous letters received by Judge J. W. Hanby, according to his announcement in court today, have led him to doubt reports of the seriousness of the condition which is keeping Courtland S. Dines, Denver oil man, out of the court as a material witness in the hearing of Horace Greer, the ex-creator of Mabel Normand, film actress. Greer is charged with shooting Dines on New Year's night while the Denver oil man was entertaining Miss Normand and Edna Purviance, another film actress.

Because of Dines' absence today the hearing was further postponed until February 18. The court ordered an expert report on Dines' physical condition to be delivered February 20, two days before the date set for the next hearing.

HEART OF ATLANTA WRUNG WITH GRIEF

ence time and again gave evidence of its deep feeling of reverence for the matchless leadership of Woodrow Wilson during the years that he stood at the helm of the great republic by bursts of spontaneous applause.

Over the back of the platform hung a huge likeness of the former president, surrounded by American flags, while the speaking tribune was draped in black and white, symbolic of the deepest mourning.

Spirit Marches On.

Those bursts of applause and spontaneous approbation of tributes by speakers showed that although the spark of mortal life has been extinguished, the spirit of Woodrow Wilson will go marching on—marching through the hearts of the people. His glimpse his vision, when human freedom shall be enthroned over the crumbling ruins of imperialistic greed and the thrones of autocracy, and when the world shall lie enraptured in the miracles of eternal peace as he saw it.

No section of America can claim Woodrow Wilson. No country or race can claim him. He was for all the world. His words are in constant battle, and his spirit is ever against the truth against deceit, of right against might, of human freedom against oppression—pillars that will strengthen the weak nations in the future, shafts of heavenly light that will pierce the gloom and despair of tyranny and banish the terrors of war and despotism.

When America finally will see his vision unobscured by partisan subterfuge and takes her appointed place in the affairs of humanity, nations will call the name of Woodrow Wilson blessed, because he had the courage to shoulder the burden and show the world that reason and common sense could govern, and that nations could settle their disputes without the blotting out of millions of young lives.

Solemn Occasion.

Silent and erect, with the dignity of solemnity, representatives of the army and navy, the marine corps, and the aviation corps, sat on the platform with civic and state leaders, clergy, and other prominent citizens. All had come to honor the memory of a great American—one of the world's immortals whose vision was that of peace on earth in the midst of Armageddon, and whose spirit rose to heights unknown for the ideal of human freedom first conceived in Philadelphia and later embodied in the autonomy of the tyrants. "We are tonight solemnly aware that the wedge between the Hohenzollerns and the people of Germany—whose mightier sword than ours was the conquering hosts of America's youth and who would have gathered the nations of the world with their passions and grudge and the day of the Hun, around the council table of reason."

"May Well Boast."

"Woodrow Wilson may well boast among the angels in heaven of his matchless record as an American president," Dr. Jones said.

Speaking in reference to a motion adopted unanimously at the meeting to erect a memorial to Woodrow Wilson in Atlanta, Dr. Jones, in conclusion of his address, spoke of the league of nations, declaring: "We shall not sleep nor slumber until we have erected an imperishable memorial, when not lagging in apologetic excuses we shall yet follow the spirit of Woodrow Wilson and put America in the place she belongs, that of the leadership in the league of nations."

"As he died for a great cause, as the flame of life was quenched in Washington, I doubt not that it lit the place of victory and at the moment when the spark went out the light in Geneva grew brighter," Dr. Jones said.

Judge Hillyer Speaks.

Judge George Hillyer, mentor of the Atlanta bar, who admitted Woodrow Wilson to the practice of law here, said that if the Anglo-Saxon races would draw closer together and carry out the aspirations of Woodrow Wilson, the great danger that is bringing over the world, especially in Europe and other countries, would be avoided.

"We are too close to the struggle to give Wilson and his work his due perspective," said Marvin Underwood, one of the speakers. He described the late President Wilson as the greatest American of all times, and perhaps the greatest human of the century.

"He was broken on the wheel of misunderstanding and materialism, throughout his life we may observe the ascendancy of the idealists of democracy. The methods introduced by him in the schools of which he was the head, his later work in progressive legislation."

WILSON NOT DEAD.

"We have that vision, but it is not complete. But the time will come when we will have it rounded out in the fullness he conceived. Woodrow Wilson is not dead. Today we salute his immortal spirit," said Mr. Underwood in conclusion.

Dr. Ashby Jones in opening his address said that the spirit of a nation is tested by its choice of heroes. "The American people are at the judgment seat of the spirit of Woodrow Wilson. I dare to declare that in future, as we are to the spirit of Woodrow Wilson, so shall we be to the spirit of the history," Dr. Jones said.

"When the mists of prejudice lifted, when the raucous melody of partisan politics was hushed, and the truth and light and read the mystery of this unique personality."

The speaker divided the life of the late president into three periods: preparation, of administration and retirement.

"During those years of training he lived in the current thought of the humanity of the past. He was ever tracing effect back to cause."

"In that psychic atmosphere of human freedom the spirit of Woodrow Wilson was born, but the day has not come which will forge that vision into accomplishment."

Dr. Jones retraced the life of the president during his administrative period.

He spoke of the inflexible financial system of the country as it existed before President Wilson originated the federal reserve system. "Federal reserve was such a superb stroke of strategy, never such significant diplomacy. More marvelous than the march of conquering America was seen such a stroke of strategy as the Hohenzollern autocrats and the people."

"In his conception of a League of Nations he was bringing the passions of nations within the atmosphere of reason and he endeavored to set up a different system of arbitration than machine guns."

"His Leagues Crime."

"O judgment of the future, O recording angel, this is the crime of Woodrow Wilson—for this he died and for this he shall be glorified in the judgment of generations that are to come," Dr. Jones exclaimed.

"I care little about the methods of his administration and I care little about the subterfuges put in the place of great enterprises. But he was the man who took upon himself the responsibility and the burden."

"It has been said he should have taken with him a dagger with which to slay the traitors of his own time. But why should he not have spoken in 1919 as he did in 1917. The people went with him in 1917. They called us a nation of traitors and so we are. They called us dollar men. But we electrified every soldier that was on the battlefield and he made this nation his army."

Close to the World.

"In his early days he watched the rise and fall of nations. No man has ever had better preparation for the task he assumed later. He did not simply walk with the great but with vicarious sympathy he went into the heart of the world, he lived the life of the world, he lived the life of the world, he lived the life of the world."

"No nation lives unto itself. No people could ever be isolated. To him peace was one abiding place for the human race. Yet no man ever better understood the different races and languages and traditions of his time," Dr. Jones continued.

Mrs. T. T. Stevens, chairman of a joint committee of Atlanta civic organizations, had general charge of the memorial service, which was held at the Metropolitan tower, under the direction of Enrico Leide, was given by members of the Atlanta Federation of Musicians.

On the committee of arrangements were Mrs. T. T. Stevens, Governor Clifford Walker, L. N. Ragsdale, Mayor J. B. Sime, Paul V. Norcross, Julian V. Boehm, president Inter-Civic council; Major. Foxwell McWhorter, American Legion; Judge George Hillyer, Dr. Ashby Jones, Mrs. Charles T. Phillips, Mrs. Bun Wyllie, Mrs. W. S. Coleman, Mrs. E. D. McDonald, Mrs. George Corley, Mrs. Sam Jones, Mrs. Samuel Norcross, Mrs. R. K. Rambo, Mrs. Arthur I. Harris, Mrs. A. C. Newell, Mrs. William A. Wright, Mrs. Oscar Palmer, Mrs. J. Kling and Mrs. Norman Sharp.

Resolution Passed.

Following is the resolution adopted at the meeting:

"Whereas, in accordance with the divine plan, the span of life for Woodrow Wilson is closed and his spirit has departed to dwell forever in the mansion not built with hands; and

"Whereas, rising from obscurity he passed through the varied phases of life until he reached the position where the nations of the earth looked upon him as the world's protector at a time when chaos reigned supreme; and

"Whereas, he was not only the friend and adviser of lands beyond the seas but was the ideal of his own people, his own state, and particularly endeared to the people of Atlanta by reason of his one-time residence here; and

"Whereas, we believe that such a character, such an influence, and such an inspiration should not be permitted to pass away and entombed with his earthly body;

"Therefore, be it resolved, That we the people of Atlanta, Ga., recognize that, in the passing of Woodrow Wilson, the world has lost one of its greatest benefactors, one of its most noble statesmen, a man whose noble statesman's life was lived in unwavering courage and bravery, surrendering only to the bugle call of the King of Kings; and that his life for his country as truly as if he had fallen on the fields of battle."

"Be it further resolved, That from the great heart of Atlanta goes forth a message of sympathy and condolence to the various members of the family, assuring them of our firm belief that he who fought and died for peace, has entered into his peaceful reward."

"Be it further resolved, That we are unwilling to have the example of his life go for naught; and to this end we recommend that his deeds, his ideals and his memory be perpetuated by a fitting memorial to be erected from the various organizations of the city."

WAXCROSS OBSERVES FUNERAL HOUR.

Waycross, Ga., February 6.—(Special.)—Waycross today paid its final tribute to the memory of Woodrow Wilson, when all stores and public offices in the city were closed during the hour of a funeral. With flags flying from buildings at half mast, and with the wheels of public and private industries stopped for an hour, a sorrowful citizens turned their thoughts to Washington where the late president was being performed over the body of the dead statesman.

Students of the Junior and senior high school gathered in the auditorium of the school at noon today to listen to a glowing tribute to the late war president delivered by Col. John W. Bennett, president of the board of education.

MARTHA BERRY EULOGIZES WILSON.

Mount Berry, Ga., February 6.—(Special.)—Regular chapel services of the Berry school today were turned into an impressive memorial service for Woodrow Wilson. The close friends of the late president, Mrs. Berry and the Wilson family have long existed. Special music was furnished by the students and Miss Martha Berry delivered the eulogy.

Covington Holds Union Services.

Covington, Ga., February 6.—(Special.)—Union memorial services for Woodrow Wilson were held at the First Methodist church of Covington, this afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. J. T. Tamm, pastor of the church, was in charge.

Mercer Holds Wilson Service.

Macon, Ga., February 6.—(Special.)—Mercer university and residents of Macon today paid tribute to the memory of Woodrow Wilson in a chapel service held on the university campus. Louis D. Newton, secretary of the Christian Index, of Atlanta, and Clem Powers, local attorney, spoke on the life of the ex-president.

NEW YORK PAUSES TO GIVE BENEDICTION.

New York, February 6.—New York, bustling city of half a hundred nationalities, gave Woodrow Wilson its greatest tribute today. As the coffin was being lowered into the vault in Bethlehem chapel in Washington, it stood for a minute, silent, remembering the man whom the world honored, his high ideals, his faith in America.

As the mists of a damp, gloomy afternoon hung heavy over the canyon of lower Broadway, over the streaming tide of traffic on the uptown avenues, over the acres of apartments and tenements, there was a strange hush.

The countless line of motor cars slowed, pedestrians halted their steps, subway and elevated trains ground to a stop. In the hundreds of churches people knelt in prayer.

In Madison Square Garden, the city's most famous auditorium, more than 10,000 persons stood with bowed heads while two army trumpets sounded "Taps." At the National Democratic club men prominent in the councils of the dead leader's party gathered in their spoken tributes to pay him the tribute of silence.

Walk on Tip-Toes.

The crowd that gathered in the garden filled even the topmost gallery. The ruder girls of the auditorium and the tiers of galleries were hung heavy with the national colors, the only decoration except for a large picture of the war president above the speakers' stand and a wreath of flowers from the war mothers of New York state. There was no noise except the soft tip-toeing and no conversation as the thousands of four, five and six seaters, and there was no scramble for the doors when Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, concluding the service, said: "Thy servant, Heavenly Father, give Thy peace."

Women wept and men wept as the doors swung open. The big clock in the Metropolitan tower, down the square, boomed the half hour, and it was over.

On the lips of all who spoke there was praise for the high purity of the dead, hope that his ideals one day would be realized, and sorrow that he had been summoned before that time had come.

"I recall," said John W. Davis, former ambassador to Great Britain, "that in the late spring of 1919, in answer to a question as to his own condition and strength Mr. Wilson replied that he was very weak, that he purposed to return to the United States to fight for ratification of his treaty, and then take a long sleep. And now that sleep has come."

NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC CLUB, JAMES W. GERARD, FORMER AMBASSADOR TO GERMANY, SAID MR. WILSON WAS MOURNED AS A MAN WHO BELONGED TO THE WORLD RATHER THAN TO THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

BELLS OF PRINCETON TOLL REQUIEM.

Princeton, N. J., February 6.—As the last rites were being conducted at the nation's capital for the late Woodrow Wilson, Princeton university suspended all campus activities out of respect to the memory of the man who for eight years guided its destinies as president.

The bell on old Nassau hall tolled from 3:30 until 4 o'clock, while mid-year examinations, previously scheduled for the afternoon, were postponed.

President John Greer Hibben had left for Washington earlier in the day with the Princeton delegation to attend the funeral. Throughout the town of Princeton church bells tolled and by request of Mayor E. M. Updyke all stores closed at 2 p. m. and remained closed until 6.

Others who eulogized Mr. Wilson were the Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, George L. Berry, president of the International Pressmen's union, and Acting Mayor William T. Collins. Roland S. Morris, former ambassador to Japan, presided. Speaking at the memorial service at the

JURY STARTS PROBE OF VETS' BUREAU

Chicago, February 6.—Grand jury investigation of the conduct of the veterans' bureau under former Director Charles R. Forbes began today. Following the swearing in of the special grand jury, several persons who figured in the senate investigation of the bureau were called into the jury room. The proceedings are secret. More than 50 witnesses are understood to be under summons to appear.

Federal Judge George A. Carpenter in charging the jury characterized the inquiry as "probably the most important investigation in the United States in the past 100 years."

"If there is evidence of misconduct of officers of the veterans' bureau, it will be your duty to indict, regardless of whom you hit," the judge said.

"I understand the department of justice will submit facts concerning the purchase of sites for hospitals, the construction of hospitals and general regarding the conduct of the affairs of the veterans' bureau. I think will show a violation of the criminal statutes with respect to the expenditure of money so appropriated."

WILSON RESTS IN PEACEFUL CLOISTERS

drawn on, thousands took their places along the way from house to chapel to stand long in the chill air, unimpaired of the furries of snow and rain that beat about them. The wide avenue over which the dead was being borne was lined with people and kept clear of traffic until he should have passed.

Before the house, across the street, a solid rank of people had gathered before the first of those who would join with the family in the home service had arrived. They stood oblivious of cold, waiting to bare their heads a moment. Opposite them the guard of honor came to stand in ranks before the house, soldiers, sailors and marines.

Singly and in groups the little company that could be admitted to the house came and passed within. This came President and Mrs. Coolidge, the honor guard saluting as their commander-in-chief passed to stand beside the bier of a dead colleague. This came others who had stood shoulder to shoulder with Woodrow Wilson in his days of greatness and came also those few humble ones who could not be forgotten at such a moment.

GIFTS THAT LAST

Where Stands a Vacant Chair.

Within, on the second floor of the house, flowers were everywhere. They covered the walls and sent their soft fragrance down from every niche and corner. There are three rooms and a short hallway on this floor, the living rooms of the house. Wide doors had been opened to make them one room that all who should be present at this intimate service in the home privacy the dead man loved might at least hear what was said.

In the study, where a great vacant chair before the fireplace stood under a portrait of the dead man, the casket had been set. On the walls about clustered the old, trusted friends of many years, books ranging from the Bible to the latest fiction. The spaces where old pictures had been by ties of memory, looked down. At one side stood the piano brought from the place of the dead man's childhood. On the other side of those other years before greatness had found Woodrow Wilson out and called him forth to battle and death.

It was among these surroundings of a quiet, home loving thinker, the precious memory laden things of home, that old friends were now gathering to pay him last honors.

Casket Open For Awhile.

For a little while before the service began, the casket was open and a few who knew and loved him best might gaze a moment at the still, pain-worn face into which death had brought at last something almost of the placid look of the years of peace. Not all of those who crowded the rooms had this opportunity. It was reserved only for intimates, of choice, station in life, who mingled in this silent company.

There was dim light in the rooms. The shades were drawn, and only the glow from the casket and the light from the candles that gently placed the steel covering above the dead face, and men had known their friend's face in the casket. The members of the family came down stairs, leaving only Mrs. Wilson and the two daughters of the dead president in the study. At the head of the bier, the three clergymen took their places at the head of the bier.

Chimes Toll Hour.

The mellow chime of the great hall clock, just three solemn strokes through the stillness. As the last tone sounded and died, Dr. Taylor, the pastor in Washington under whom Woodrow Wilson sat in all his years of presidential greatness, raised his voice:

"The Lord is my Shepherd," he read, "I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul: he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thou art my Shepherd. Thy rod and thy staff, they comfort me: thou art my Shepherd. Thou art my Shepherd, O Lord my God, thou art my Shepherd. Thy goodness and thy mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and thou shalt dwell in my house for ever. My life shall be increased by peace, and my path by thy goodness. Thy goodness and thy mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and thou shalt dwell in my house for ever. My life shall be increased by peace, and my path by thy goodness."

As Dr. Taylor said the last word of the Psalm there was a murmur of "Amen," and he gave place to his colleague, Professor Dr. J. H. Johnson. Mr. Wilson's pastor in those far-off, quiet days. With raised hands the minister, made the company pray, bidding his own people that divine aid be given in the realization of the high vision of a world at peace the dead president had glimpsed.

Just before the body bearers set down their burden again and withdrew to join their comrades in the standing group at the back of the room. The black gown minister, the two daughters and the other members of the family moved to their places on the left while President Coolidge and the honorary pallbearers and old friends turned to vacant seats to the right, where the cabinet members already stood.

Day Is Dying in the West.

The Bishop Freeman began the reading of the thirty-ninth psalm: "Lord, let me know mine end, and the number of my days. For mine days are consumed like smoke, and my bones are dried as tinder, and my heart is broken like a harp. My days are as a shadow, and I am as a flower that withereth. For mine days are as grass that groweth, and I am as a flower that withereth. For mine days are as a shadow, and I am as a flower that withereth."

As the solemn words were spoken the clock chimed the quarter hour and the simple, home service of Woodrow Wilson, plain American, had been said as he wished it said.

Into the room came eight men from the honor guard, their sun-tanned, youthful faces set in solemn recognition of the dignity and honor of the place that had been given them. They stood solemnly and erect at attention, beside the black casket upon which now lay the cluster of orchids, Mrs. Wilson's favorite flower, the flowers her dead husband often had sent her in the glad other days. Then the soldier, sailor and marine comrades moved and raised the fallen chieftain to bear him out for his last journey.

Outside, the other men of the guard had doubled the short way across the sidewalk to the waiting hearse. As the house door swung back and the three clergymen stepped out to take their places beside the hearse door, up and down the steep, narrow street the multitude which had waited long for this brief glimpse unworried in the chill air. The men of the guard stood at stiff salute as their comrades bore the casket down through the double rank and lifted it gently into the hearse.

Draped in Mourning.

Behind the casket came Mrs. Wilson in deepest black, with a thick veil shading her sadness from curious eyes. She leaned on her brother's arm and was helped into a waiting car that moved off at once down the hill behind the hearse. The guard was formed in rank on each side.

Next from the house came William G. McAdoo. The daughters of the dead president were supported on his arms as he helped them to the car awaiting them. Behind these came the other members of the family, the brother and those less closely kin to the dead. There was but one vacancy in the immediate family circle, the place Mrs. Sayre, the third daughter and her husband would have filled had time permitted their arrival.

Behind the family came President and Mrs. Coolidge, heading the group of distinguished men and old comrades who made up the funeral party. They were taken in the slow-moving car to the Mount Vernon Place Episcopal church under the auspices of the Baltimore Federation of Churches and attended by city, state and federal officials.

At each army post of the third army corps area, the troops were paraded, and President Coolidge's proclamation of the death of the former president was read. A salute of 13 guns was fired at sunrise, a single shot sounds every 30 minutes and a 48-gun salute will mark the setting of the sun.

At Annapolis the state legislature met in a joint memorial session, at which speakers paid tribute to the fallen leader, and an address delivered to the house by Mr. Wilson while governor of New Jersey was read.

There were only a few remaining about the chapel entrance as that last, clear message was sounded. The great crowd of the soldier and marine guards at salute until the last note died.

Wilson Honored

Washington, February 6.—Hours before the time for the funeral, crowds of people, admirers of the ex-president, began to gather before the Wilson home, coming singly and by twos and threes. Taking their places quietly along the sidewalk opposite the home, they stood and gazed.

About 1:30 they began to stream down S street in droves; the whole sidewalk for a block was packed and overflowing when the funeral procession began.

A score of little boys climbed the bare, frail trees in the vacant lot across from the Wilson home, and clung there like young monkeys. Two girls sat in the crook of an ancient, decayed tree overlooking the high mud bank which leads from the lot down to the sidewalk, swinging their legs and chatting. Space on this cold, wet bank was at a premium. Elegantly dressed women folded expensive wraps under them and sat on the damp ground for hours.

Two flappers, who have stood on the sidewalk opposite the home every day since Wilson died, were back at their station again Wednesday. One of them wore galoshes. They stood on a heavy coat, wrapping it around their ankles as a protection against the chilly air.

There was a flutter of amusement in the crowd at the efforts of women to climb the slippery mud bank and get to places of vantage on the top. Many of them slipped and almost fell. Men and women who were already up reached their hands down good-naturedly and assisted.

An Englishman with a thoroughbred Belgian wolf shepherd furnished amusement to the early arrivals when he posed his trick dog for a photographer. The dog is "Von Dev," winner of several medals abroad. His owner and trainer, Andy de Vere, was a derby hat and patent-leather shoes and a tight-fitting black overcoat over his smart cut suit. They were on the same side of the street with the Wilson home, but no one interfered with them.

Half an hour before the funeral was scheduled to begin, a boy rushed into the house with a late package from one of the local stores.

At the last minute three messenger boys darted simultaneously up to the door with telegrams. They were stopped at the threshold, for the door had just opened. They stood with bare heads as the casket was carried past, and then delivered their messages to one of the attendants.

A low hubbub of conversation began as notables of the past administration began to arrive for the funeral. A car came down the street and turned into the drive across from the Wilson home. Its way was blocked by the throngs. A police captain ordered it cleared.

There was an undertone of expectant conversation while the crowd waited for the end of the ceremony, which was being conducted behind the closed doors. The honorary military escort snatched into their places and lined up outside the door. Two boys in the tree across the street called in shrill voices to each other. Then the door opened, a great cheer fell upon the whole crowd. The casket was brought out. The automobiles for the visitors filed by, taking their passengers. Quickly the crowd dispersed as the lone procession dipped down S street and then began its journey up the winding hill ahead to the cathedral, far up on the summit.

Among the last arrivals for the funeral were former Secretary of the Navy Joseph Daniels and his wife, and Representative, Cornell Hull, of Tennessee, chairman of the democratic national committee. They went into the house just before 3 o'clock.

News photographers were everywhere. They crowded about the door as the casket was brought out. They followed along the route, taking long-distance pictures of the cortege as it wound up the long Massachusetts avenue hill. Several of them climbed to the top of the partly constructed cathedral, perched 100 feet above the ground and snapped the procession as it moved into the close beneath them.

One familiar figure was missing from the small group which followed the casket through the ceremonies. That was Joseph P. Tumulty, who was secretary to Mr. Wilson for eleven years, beginning back in New Jersey. Tumulty and the late president broke two years ago, though the former secretary still gave voice to his devotion at every opportunity. He trailed into the chapel alone, behind the funeral group, and stood at the rear, looking on with and countenance.

LEAGUE IS REQUESTED TO FIX EASTER DATE

Geneva, February 6.—The Federal Churches of Christ in America have written the League of Nations that it is deeply interested in the efforts of the league to get a universal agreement for a fixed date for Easter. Letters have been dispatched to representatives of the Christian churches and to all governments requesting an outline of views on the reforms suggested.

Appetite Gone?

A tempting, delicious looking meal—all the choicest morsels from a well stocked pantry. The fragrant aroma of all these good things failing to put a keen edge on your appetite—failing to arouse, in any degree, a hardy relish for the food so attractively placed before you. Why?

Scores of men and women are faced with the same misfortune. After a day of toil—when they are tired—when good things to eat should be ravishly sought to recharge their vitality and fit them for play time—their stomachs turn. They are worn down, flayed out. Food has no appeal. To them it is sickening. The aroma of appetizing things nauseates them.

Red blood cells are missing. The blood which should be coursing through your veins strengthening your vitality—adding to your strength—keeping you healthy and fit—is not to be found.

LASH IMPRISONING TO BE RESTORED

ALL CHAMPIONS SELECTED BY TEX RICKARD

Added to Force; Cops Must Stand

Columbiana, Ala., February 6.—Seven convicts were indicted for alleged conspiracy to kill warden and restoration of the lash in execution of the Shelby county grand jury today on the matter of state prisoners at Aldrich, Ga., on January 12.

The immediate cause of the indictment, according to the report, was the "dog house" punishment administered to a certain convict who wrote a "false and baseless" letter to two state officials.

In defense of the lash the grand jury recalls that two serious matters of conviction of the day in 1913 on September 10, 1923, and the other M. Aldrich, have occurred since the abolition of corporal punishment.

The dog house, described by the grand jury as a "small enclosure built next to the wall in a room on the lower floor of the stockade at Aldrich, which enclosure is only large enough to accommodate a man standing, there being no room for him to sit or rest his body in any way except in the upright position."

"Every convict," continues the report, "prefers the 'dog house' mode of punishment to the lash, which has been generally used until the executive order of Governor Hays standing the lash from all the convicts within the bounds of the state. We do not care to be understood to mean that we recommend the lash when other modes of punishment would be effective."

Warden J. N. Jernigan in charge of Aldrich, which enclosure is only large enough to accommodate a man standing, was given a clean bill of health as a man "well qualified to fill the position he holds." His assistant is also praised for his fair treatment of the prisoners.

The jury also found the meals, rooms and sanitary condition of the convict camp to be good.

Of all the former fighters—that is, up to, but not including those of today—I would select them for the greatest in their class like this:

Heavyweight—Jim Jeffries.
Light Heavyweight—Bob Fitzsimmons.

Middleweight—Ketchel.
Featherweight—Abel Gans.

Lightweight—Abel Gans.
Tall lightweight—Abel Gans.

No greater fighter than Bob Fitzsimmons ever lived. At the same time I don't believe he could have licked me in the ring.

I have purposely left Benny Leonard out of my calculations. He is still a great fighter and may even get a shot at the title.

Coy and Jeffries. Tom made a lot of money.

The next was George La Blanche, who knocked out the famous old Jack Dempsey, the Nonpareil, with his right blow. Then came Sailor Burke by the way, was the first to knock out Joe Grim. The same Grim is still used among fighters to denote a man who could take a lot of punishment.

What "Joe Grim" Means and Why.
The navy also turned out two really good lightweights in Paddy Ryan and Tommy Dwyer. Then there were Larry Prendergast and Billy Shevlin.

Probably the most famous of fighters was Frank Moran, who was killed by the president's yacht Mayflower, from which he was discharged to become a real professional. He can name a dozen more mediocre navy fighters. Yes, I guess Uncle Sam's boats turned out more fighters than any other source of fighters.

There is a good illustration of the point I made early in this series of articles that it is now important to select a fighter whom the public wants to see than to match them with the scrap which he will even up. Joe Grim never could fight much, but he could stand more fighting than any man in the world.

The very best of the fighters were the ones who were killed. Captain A. J. Holcomb, recently named head of plainclothes, was elected to succeed Lonnie L. Stone as night clerk to the city of Atlanta.

Traffic signal policemen were dispossessed of their stools and the ten new patrolmen authorized by the January finance sheet of city council were elected, and a special meeting of the police committee of council at police station Wednesday night.

Orders requiring traffic officers to stand up while operating traffic lights in the downtown district were issued, with the approval of Chief of Police James L. Beavers, as a move to increase the efficiency of the traffic force. Officers have been accustomed to arranging comfortable seats for themselves which, members of the police committee said, has resulted in a degree of carelessness in operating the lights.

The ten new policemen were provided by council to facilitate organization of the proposed accident prevention bureau, but pending organization of the bureau were assigned to regular duty with the three police watches. One, E. J. Hunt, who has served with the plainclothes squad for several months, was elected and assigned to plainclothes duty.

The other new men, selected in order of seniority from the supernumerary police list, were W. G. Baldwin, L. O. Portworth, W. M. May, J. P. Buchanan, P. H. Jones, George O. Carroll, M. B. Johnson, J. C. Bennett and J. J. Chester.

MUSICALS THEATERS : MOVIES

Atlanta Theatre—Today, Friday and Saturday, "Good Morning, Dearie."

Lyric Theatre—All week, the Lyric players in "Happiness," starring Isabelle Lowe.

Loew's—All week, Loew's vaudeville and feature pictures. (See advertisement for program.)

Keith's Forsyth—Keith's vaudeville and news reels. (See advertisement for program.)

Howard Theatre—All week, Lenore Ulric in "Tiger Rose," and other features.

"Good Morning, Dearie."
(At Atlanta Tonight.)
You will not miss if you select "Good Morning, Dearie," which will be seen at the Atlanta theatre to-night and for the rest of the week, with matinee Saturday, as one of your engagements for the week. It is a "regular" in these days, when you never know whether a musical show is or is not.

Of course, the name of Anne Caldwell as author would count for something.

And Jerome Kern, who has given us some of the best tunes to come via the theatre route for several years, has written the music which has been a success in many respects his other great success, "Sally."

The company is a big one. The regular theatre will be augmented by the director and musicians carried by the company.

The company playing here is the one which has been playing "Good Morning, Dearie," the original production being carried intact.

"Happiness."
(At the Lyric.)
Luxury and happiness do not always go together; neither do poverty and unhappiness. That truth is the basis for J. Hartley Manners' great comedy, "Happiness," the play of the week at the Lyric theatre. Miss Isabelle Lowe, as Jenny, the shopgirl philosopher who guides rich and poor alike into spiritual success, is making the true Christian philosophy plain to Atlanta theatre-goers in a way they have not seen before.

And if you don't think so, there's a real "big brother" to a homeless kid. See this film and know how good a picture really can be!

"The Old Soak."
(Coming to Atlanta Theatre.)
The Atlanta theatre will be occupied for four performances the first half of next week by Raymond Hitchcock, a comedian who needs no introduction to theatergoers. Upon this occasion, however, the event takes on special interest because the popular star is to make his initial bow as a portrayal of a legitimate character in a straight comedy, with none of the familiar decorations of musical revue, so long associated with Mr. Hitchcock's noteworthy stage career.

Beginning last September, "Hitchy's" tour in "The Old Soak" has been a series of ovations and it is safe to say his future career will be a matching of talent with the favorite of the legitimate branch of stage art. The seat sale begins Friday morning.

Midnight Frolic.
(At the Lyric.)
The Atlanta Frolic this time will be under the personal direction of Charlie Bailey, owner of the Eighty-One theatre.

Bailey has brought to Atlanta an all-star bill so they could feature the big show on Friday night.

As headliner, he has secured Bessie Smith, the Columbia record jazz singer, and Charlie Anderson, the nationally known yodeler who sings for Okeh records.

In addition to these acts, there will be Carrie Nugget, the champion woman back and wing dancer of the world. Carrie offers some of the same dance she did for the crowned heads of Europe. Then the act of Original Rags, the old Al G. Field star, is on the bill. This promise to be a vaudeville performance you can't pass up.

Show starts promptly at 10:45 Friday night.

The performance of Eddie Haywood, the regular piano player, is alone worth the price of admission.

WALTER L. TALLENT
DIES ON WEDNESDAY
Walter L. Talient, 35, prominent in fraternal circles, died Wednesday night at the residence, 285 East Georgia avenue. He was a member of Capital City lodge, K. of P.; Kibla temple, D. O. K. K.; and local No. 274 of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

He is survived by his wife, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Talient; six brothers, J. W. Fritz, Guy and Clyde Talient, all of Atlanta; Charles Talient, of Lula, and Higdon Talient, of Chicago, and two sisters, Mrs. L. L. Strahl and Mrs. Robert Broadwater, of Atlanta. T. C. Bazemore, funeral director, in charge.

"Tiger Rose."
(At the Howard.)
David Belasco's famous stage success, "Tiger Rose," featuring Lenore Ulric, playing at the Howard theatre this week, has met with the utmost approval of the audiences. The story of "Tiger Rose," set in the far north-west, in the region where men and wild beasts roared at large, impelled by instincts of hunger, love and fear, is one of the most dramatic and stirring of the modern theatre. The picture is said to move and tingle with human interest.

The overture for the week is "Hills of the Home," by Miss Eileen Van Biele, lyric soprano.

"Name the Man."
(At the Metropolitan.)

NEW INDUSTRIES TO BE DISCUSSED

Arrangements were being completed Wednesday for the conference called for 3 o'clock Monday afternoon by Mayor Walter A. Sims to plan the launching of an Atlanta bureau of industries. The general plan to be followed is that of the Baltimore bureau that brought millions of dollars of new capital and furnished employment to thousands of new laborers, it was announced.

H. Lindley French, executive director of the Baltimore bureau, is to outline the Baltimore plan to Atlanta interests represented at the conference Monday. Banks, manufacturers, real estate, mercantile and wholesale interests will participate in the conference, and the general public has been invited to attend. Several prominent Atlantans will discuss the local industrial outlook.

Baltimore's success, according to reports here, is the result of careful investigation of industrial opportunities and information was gained to show what articles could be manufactured more profitably in Baltimore than in other cities. Accessibility to sources of supplies, and to markets, power and labor conditions and other factors were listed, it was pointed out.

Baltimore is already the greatest trade center in the south, with 13 railroads distributing hundreds of products, it is the plan of Atlantans interested to induce the location of factories here which are now making articles from materials with which Atlanta is surrounded. It is the belief of the sponsors of the bureau plan that hundreds of articles now sold through branch offices in Atlanta and shipped from factories 500 to 2,500 miles from Atlanta, can be produced cheaper here than elsewhere, and can be placed in the consumer's hands at a lower cost because of smaller freight bills.

Atlanta's unsurpassed climate is to be offered as an additional inducement to owners of large enterprises to take up residence here, it was stated. The bureau will provide a ready service to factories already established in Atlanta, discovering logical new markets and furnishing information to indicate safe lines of expansion, according to plans now under way.

FAST ALBANY FIVE ATTACKS A. A. C. AT AUDITORIUM

Turnstiles' Deathly Silence Stops Knuckle Program

Crowd Does Not Show Up

BY PAUL WARWICK.

Owing to the taciturnity of the crowd and the more or less essential habit of eating which promoters and fighters, through long years of practice, have acquired, the fight which was to have occurred last evening between Tim O'Dowd and Earl Parryer was called off, disbanded, abolished, dismissed and eliminated.

This was done by Promoter Walk Miller, after due deliberation and discussion with E. Walter Tripp and Jimmy Goldsmith, the only members of the Atlanta boxing commission who had rumbled down to the Auditorium to act in their official capacities when the action was taken—about 8:20.

No matter how great the potentialities of a boxing commission, it is evident that they can't force the crowds to come out and it lies beyond their province and authority to prevent disappointment to a raft of fans who will go to any contest authorized under the commission's rules and regulations. Something ought to be done about the latter item.

True, you can't blame Walk, for there was scarcely a corporal's guard in the building. The only vestige of a line at the box office put in its appearance when the announcement had been made by Earl Elrod that the fight was off. Then there was a line at the box office, but a line with reverse English. It probably looked bigger to Walk than it did when it was in the house. But at that, it wasn't such a whooper, and Walk estimated his house a just about $200. There were the usual number of deadheads, including us, who were saved the trouble of lining up.

Some Little Tre.

Lobby comment seemed to believe that the commission should not have allowed the fight to be called off, but there is nothing in the commission's rules which covers the case—and we have just read them, from the illuminating passage, about water-buckets, powdered stools, resin for seconds and fans for the canvas on through the lifting verses about all contestants being of male persuasion. Commissioner Tripp, when asked for a statement concerning the commission's attitude, said that the commission had none; that it was none of their business, that the promoters had complied with the regulations, there wasn't enough money, and that's all there was to it.

Secretary Goldsmith stated that he and Mr. Tripp had looked over the house and that "as a measure of protection to the promoters and the fighters, it had better be called off."

The other commissioners were not attracted by the show.

To be sure, the cash-paying public is resulted at walking down to the Auditorium and failing to see what it went for—even if it's money is given back. And since the public, as well as the fighters and promoters has repeatedly declared and which it does not fail to recognize—it seems that the regulation will have to go farther than supervision over the bout after it has been scheduled.

For promoters are not philanthropists and don't like to die in their jeans for coin of the realm that spell absolute loss, any more than you or I.

So it appears that the commission's only chance is to bear down on the bouts they authorize; withhold authorization until a card with earmarks of a genuine attraction appears; withhold authorization from a card that follows too closely on another card.

This will protect the whole shooting match—promoter, fighter and last, but not actually least, the public.

The boxing commission has a wonderful opportunity in Atlanta, and with the concentrated quiescence of experience it is calling recently, covering every angle of dissatisfaction from public, promoter and fighter, should soon develop into a body that is doing the game real good in Atlanta.

Clash With Strong Albany Quint Tonight

The above picture shows a few of the cagers representing the Atlanta Athletic club quint which will meet the Albany "Y" tonight at the auditorium. The Albany five were the victors over the club early in the season and the outcome tonight will be watched with interest.

Bulldogs Capture Hot Fight From the Auburn Plainsmen

Athens, Ga., February 6.—(Special.)—Georgia defeated Auburn again tonight, this time the score being 33 to 18, but it was only after the hardest fight seen here this season. Ed Gurr tied them himself, throwing 18 points, and had not been taken out of the game the last few minutes of play, he might have scored more than their entire team.

The game was fast and heated throughout, a total of 29 fouls being called, causing both a Georgia and an Auburn man to retire from the game banished and discouraged. And at times when the ball would be attacked by practically all the players of both teams, it seemed as though the entire teams would have to be disqualified.

Auburn presented about the fastest and strictest bunch of guards yet introduced to the local fans, they stopping every Red and Black player with the exception of Gurr. Richardson was held to his lowest score of the year, while the scoring of the rest of the team was negligible. Williams played his usual good game as a floor man and it was by reason of

Aggies Praise Club Quintet

A. & M. College, Miss., February 6. (Special.)—The Mississippi Aggies, Dixie titleholders in basketball, arrived back in Aggie Town at noon today after a three-game invasion of the state of Georgia, when they played Georgia Tech, Mercer and the Atlanta Athletic club. They won the two Atlanta games and lost the one in Macon, the scores being Aggies 40, Tech 36; Aggies 22, Mercer 24; Aggies 42, Atlanta A. C. 33.

Coach Billy Hayes and his quint brought back high praise for the A. A. C. team, saying that they were the best five that the southern champs have met thus far this season. The entire Aggie team is in good shape and regular practice was held in the gym tonight to prepare for the two games with Louisiana State university next week.

A PIECE FOR THE PAPER

BY PAUL WARWICK

The S. I. C. Tourney.

If there's any chance, and there is, of Atlanta ever getting all hot up about basketball—this is it. So those frantic people who are bemoaning the fact that this replet of weeks is drawing to a close can take heart in the assurance that the S. I. C. tournament is not far away.

February 29, to be exact. By the way, suppose this hadn't been leap year—they couldn't have started the tournament.

Al Doonan, portly charge d'affaires, is busier than a one-armed guard trying to keep Perkins from shooting a basket getting things into proper shape. And from present indications it seems that there will be at least sixteen teams in action, out of the twenty-two eligible for participation. Which will provide action aplenty for the large crowds that habitually flock to tournaments.

Georgia Tech, Mississippi Aggies, University of Mississippi, Vanderbilt, Tennessee, Tulane, Louisiana State University, Alabama, Auburn, North Carolina, V. M. I., Kentucky, Washington and Lee, Clemson—these teams have virtually announced their definite decision to participate. In fact, you can mark them down as certain.

Concerning Florida, South Carolina, North Carolina State, Maryland and Sewanee there is some doubt. The University of Maryland, having just begun basketball, is not anxious to send a team, since they very reasonably feel that they might not be able to do themselves justice or provide good competition. However, in a very excellent spirit, they have offered to send a team if it will assist any in the success of the tournament.

So Perkins will be with us again! And again we can hear a repetition of the conversation overheard at the auditorium Tuesday night between two who had not previously seen him in action:

"Say, Bill, I've found out," said one, "that little fat guy is Perkins."

"That little fat guy is NOT Perkins," was the rejoinder, "he's ARSENIC!"

Sunday School Teams To Play

The local Y. M. C. A. basketball court will be the scene of three good Sunday school basketball games tonight, when the quintet of Grant Park battles the T. N. T. five, the Harris Street Presbyterians and the Druid Hills Baptist club, and the Druid Hills Presbyterian and the Second Baptist tussle.

The first game will begin at 6:30, the second at 6:50, and the last will be put on at 7:15 o'clock.

Gibbons To Meet Joe White Soon

New York, February 6.—Joe White, the Dixie light heavyweight, will be the first opponent of Tom Gibbons since Gibbons went 15 rounds with Jack Dempsey at Shelby last July 4. They will meet at Grand Rapids on the night of February 15. White is regarded as a tip-over for Gibbons and the bout probably will just get him into condition for a program of summer scrapes.

Big Track Meet In Kansas City

Kansas City, Mo., February 6.—Some of the best athletes of the middle west are entered in the Kansas City Athletic club indoor track and field meet to be held here Saturday night. Included among the stars are Harold Osborne, Joe Ray, Ray Watson and Eddie Knouick, of the Illinois Athletic club.

Osborne is the American all-around champion and Ray holds several world records in the distance and middle distance runs. Watson, a former Kansas Aggie star and track captain, is a widely-known athlete and distance man and Knouick is a pole vaulter of note.

In addition are entered Earl McKowan, a Kansas State Normal pole vaulter, who last year broke the world's indoor record; Tom Poor, of the University of Kansas, a high jumper, and Wolters, of Ames, a fast quarter-mile.

Fifty schools, including Notre Dame, eight members of the Missouri valley conference and members of the Missouri and Kansas conferences will be represented in the meet.

Hot Battle Sure To Result

BY PAUL WARWICK.

Unaccustomed to drinking the bitter dregs of defeat and all aghast for victory, up from old Dougherty county come the basketball boys of the Albany Y. M. C. A. seeking to add glamour unto glory by passing and flipping into subjection the Atlanta Athletic club on the auditorium court this very night.

What the Tech-Auburn game is to the football season, it appears, this game shows signs of being to the basketball season. Al Doonan announces that there has been a large advance sale, and that he has been named the evident apathy with which this beloved community is inclined to view basketball will agree that much stronger recommendation could not be desired.

These Albany people are fond of their basketball team, this crew of husky lads which has trounced almost without exception, every team it has faced this season. It holds a victory over the athletic club earlier in the season, but it is a victory of a different team they meet tonight, not in personnel but in action.

Albany All Agos.

Not a few of those who will watch the contest will be Albanians, for those people will travel far to see these boys—all "home-town" lads—who for years have walked up and down Pine and Washington streets and had dates for dances at Blue Springs, go up against what will probably prove their strongest foe of the season.

Couch Mooney, who directs the destinies of these lads, is an idol in Albany, and incidentally, is by way of being one of the most interesting characters within the bounds of the state.

Frank Hardy, Tony Pryse, the Smith brothers, Whiting, Heister, Davis, all of the game are good basketball players and have been playing together long enough to work with the precision of a well-oiled machine built for the purpose of scoring points.

And despite the defeat suffered Tuesday night at the hands of the Perkinsville Arvies, the athletic club is fit for battle. Joe Singleton has reached the pinnacle of righteousness, it appears, and owing to an off night (Tuesday), Rufus Boss should also scale the heights in his attempts tonight. Scraney Sullivan is a consistently right that his brilliant play often fails to make an impression, so smooth and consistent, in his scintillation.

At any rate, Atlanta is in for a great basketball game.

WOMAN CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR KILLED

New Orleans, La., February 6.—Mrs. Roland Clark, candidate for mayor of Palmetto, in the recent primary, is dead, her son and daughter wounded, and Louis Meyer is in a hospital here, probably mortally wounded as a result of a gun battle in which all of the parties concerned participated, according to the best information available here.

Mrs. Clark was opposed for election by a man named Isaacson and they pulled a vote. According to a version of the shooting received from Opelousa, near Palmetto, Mrs. Clark, accompanied by her daughter, met Meyer on the street and accused him of having brought a brother-in-law from Texas to vote for Isaacson.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germs.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga.—adv.)

and break the tie. After some words Mrs. Clark drew a pistol and shot down Meyer.

Expected to Die.

Meyer, after being wounded, drew his own pistol and shot Mrs. Clark to death. Mrs. Clark's daughter took possession of her mother's weapon and fired at Meyer, who shot and wounded her. At this juncture Mrs. Clark's son took up the battle and also was wounded by Meyer.

The shooting affray occurred last night and Meyer was brought here today for an emergency operation. Physicians said they had little hope that he would survive.

Meyer, a merchant of Palmetto, is 21 years of age. Wilda Clark, the daughter of Mrs. Clark, is 18 and Cleon, her son, is 19 years old. Meyer, Mrs. Clark and her daughter used pistols while Cleon Clark was armed with a shotgun.

Surgeons who examined Meyer found that he had been shot once through the abdomen by a pistol bullet, that another bullet had made a superficial wound in the head and that a lead bullet shot fired by young Clark lodged in his leg.

Meyer's Story.

Charles Meyer, his brother, who accompanied him to New Orleans, gave a report of his blood in a transaction operation in an effort to save his life.

Charles Meyer told a story differing from that received from Opelousa. He said the trouble grew out of the belief that his brother had told something detrimental to the character of Miss Wilda Clark, and added that Mrs. Clark had accused Louis Meyer of taking an automobile that belonged to her and going "joy riding" in it.

"My brother was standing in the railroad station at Palmetto," he said. "Mrs. Clark came across the railroad tracks and knocked on the door of the station. Her daughter was with her."

"My brother came out with his stick in his hand. I heard Mrs. Clark say, 'I didn't hear what she said. Then she pulled a revolver and fired. She fired again. My brother sagged down and as he did do Wilda Clark seized his stick. Then he drew his revolver and fired. Mrs. Clark's son then came around from some box cars and fired at him. So far as I know, nothing to do with the origin of the quarrel."

Louis Meyer corroborated his brother's statement and denied that he had uttered the remark attributed to him by Mrs. Clark.

Wilson-Clemenceau Secret Agreement Rumor Is Denied

Paris, February 6.—(By the Associated Press.)—"The report of a secret agreement between President Wilson and Premier Clemenceau regarding the occupation of the Rhine for fifteen years is stupid," said Andre Tardieu, long the Tiger's right-hand man, in an authorized statement this afternoon.

M. Tardieu issued it in view of a statement quoting former Premier Lloyd George, of Great Britain, as saying such an agreement between the French premier and the American president had been made during the Paris conference at a time when the British prime minister had been called home to London and that he had only recently discovered that such a compact had been signed.

"The only agreement made by Mm. Wilson and Clemenceau," added M. Tardieu, "was made in common with the other delegates to the peace conference and was incorporated in the treaty of Versailles."

BODY OF ELBERT TO BE REINTERRED BY SAVANNAH CLUB

Savannah, Ga., February 6.—At the annual meeting of the Georgia Society of the Sons of the Revolution held last night it was decided to reinter the remains of General Samuel Elbert, ex-governor of Georgia, in Savannah. The remains were taken from a private burial ground near Savannah by the society several years ago for preservation. The chapter of the D. A. R. at Elberton, Ga., made application for the remains, with the idea of reintering them there, but this application was denied by the society last night.

President Urged To Create Department of Recreation

Secretary of War Weeks (left), John L. Golden, successful play producer (center), and Secretary of Labor Davis, snapped as they emerged from the White House recently following a conference with President Coolidge on the advisability of adding a theatrical man to the president's cabinet.

John Golden, nationally known as a play producer, recently paid a visit to President Coolidge to discuss the establishment of a "department of recreation."

No official statement regarding the effect of Mr. Golden's efforts has been announced. Such a bureau, according to Mr. Golden's plans, would have supervision over plays for the stage, the cinema and sporting events.

Old Dominion Graduates Recall Wilson in College

Richmond, Va., February 6.—Even as a student at the University of Virginia, Thomas Woodrow Wilson, as he was then known, was highly regarded as an orator. Classmates during the sessions of 1879-81 recalled two day two occasions in particular when words forcefully expounded by America's war time president won him the admiration of his fellows.

In the fall of 1880, great excitement prevailed on the campus when the student body upon leaving the dining room one evening found a notice on the bulletin board of a special meeting to be held that night to consider a proposal for the students to attack a circus then showing in Charlottesville. Two of their number had been ejected from the tent earlier in the day, because, it was learned afterward, of the objections they raised to the show not being staged in line with their views.

N. C. Manning, Jr., of Lynchburg, a classmate of Mr. Wilson's, in describing the meeting said:

"The attendance was large and tumultuous; one of the promoters of the meeting called it to order and moved that Mr. Wilson take the chair, but Mr. Wilson declined on the ground that he desired to speak on the question. Leroy Percy, who was afterwards a United States senator from Mississippi, was then nominated and presided over the meeting.

"There was great excitement and a number of fiery speeches on both sides of the question. Mr. Wilson spoke against the attack; Mr. Percy for it. Mr. Wilson was well known to the students; he was a popular and his courage was recognized by all. I have always thought that his influence with the students, combined with his wonderfully frank discussion of the reasons for and against the attack, which he summed up in the question, 'Is it worth it?' secured the defeat of the proposition by a small majority."

Lost Debate to Bruce.

The other memorable occasion in the annals of the school was recalled by Dr. Richard Heath Dabney, at present professor of history at the university and an intimate friend of Mr. Wilson during his college days. On April 2, 1880, Professor Dabney declared, Mr. Wilson with J. M. Horner, of North Carolina, afterwards an Episcopal bishop, took the part of five in a debate with William Cabell Bruce, now United States senator from Maryland, and Benjamin L. Abney, of South Carolina, on the question: "Is the Roman Catholic element in the United States a menace to American institutions?"

The debate was held under the auspices of the Jefferson Literary society and the judges rendered the following decision:

"The committee of the faculty selected by your society to judge the debates for prizes of the society, beg leave to report as follows:

"While the general character of the debate in question has been very creditable to the speakers and to the society they represent, two of the contestants have shown remarkable excellence. Being required to decide between these gentlemen, our committee is of the opinion that the medal intended for the best debater should be awarded to Mr. Bruce.

Wins Oratory Medal.

"In deciding that the position of the orator to the society, with the medal bestowed, therewith, should be awarded to Mr. Wilson our committee desires to express very high appreciation of his merits not merely as a speaker, for which honor is bestowed, but as a debater also."

M. B. Winder, another classmate of the late former president, said he remembered Mr. Wilson, chiefly as the rather frail young man whose name immediately preceded mine on the roll call of the class.

"But I also remember him," Mr. Winder added, "as one of the most brilliant contributors to the pages of the university magazine and as one of the most interesting talkers in the old Jeff hall, whether many of us were attracted by the desire to hear him."

"Indeed, I think most of his classmates were fully imbued with the impression that he devoted his time and energy to his studies, and to the study of literature and history and to the cultivation of his debating and oratorical talents than to him."

Brilliant Wedding in Americus Unites Prominent Georgians

A marriage of sincerest interest to hosts of friends throughout the state owing to the prominence of the two families was that of Miss Elizabeth Sheffield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Sheffield, and Charles Frank Lanier, which was solemnized Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents on Brown street in Americus.

Rev. John M. Outler, pastor of the First Methodist church, was the officiating minister, the impressive ring ceremony being used.

Beautiful Appointment.
The entire lower floor of the beautiful home was lavishly decorated for the occasion. The stairway, down which the wedding party descended, was entwined in southern smilax and white tulle. The altar was arranged in the drawing room, palms, foliage plants, and ferns forming an effective background for the white pedestal, holding gorgeous Easter lilies alternating with cathedral candelabra, holding white burning tapers which cast a soft glow over the room.

The spacious front veranda was enclosed in canvas and beautifully decorated with handsome palms and trailing vines of southern smilax. The wedding march from Lohengrin was beautifully played by Mrs. Herbert Blakelee, of Atlanta, a cousin of the bride, MacDowell's "To a Wild Rose" was softly rendered during the ceremony.

Bridal Party.
First to enter were the two little flower girls, Helen Sheffield, sister of the bride, and Jane Lathey, cousin of the groom, whose frocks of pale pink chiffon, creations of tiny ruffles and French roses, were of two-tone satin ribbon. They carried French baskets of Ophelia roses.

The bridesmaids, Miss Martha Bell, of Atlanta, and Miss Isabel Beasley, of Montgomery, Ala., descended the stair alone alternating with the groomsmen who were Larabee Hand, of Pelham; Frank Harold, Jr., of Howell; of Macon, and Frank Sheffield, Jr., who entered in pairs. Then came the matron of honor, Mrs. Rudolph Wright, of Moultrie, a sister of the bride, and the maid of honor, Miss Georgia Lumpkin, of Macon. The bridesmaids, matron and maid of honor were gowned in exquisite models of pale pink chiffon and lavender chiffon fashioned alike. Their gowns were fashioned in the quaint basque style with bertha edged with Venetian lace, and bouffant skirts trimmed with frills of Venetian lace alternating with narrow bands of French blue and silver metal ribbons. Small flat bows of the ribbon extending from the neck line to the hem added a charming touch. Completing the lovely costumes were old fashioned arm bouquets of Ophelia roses, coral shaded sweet peas and blue forget-me-nots.

The bride descended the stairs with her father, by whom she was given in marriage, and was joined at the altar by the groom and his brother, Harry Lanier, who acted as best man.

Lovely Bride.
The bride was a vision of girlish loveliness in her wedding gown of heavy white crepe back satin with trimmings of Venetian silver lace and a delicate tracery of seed pearls on the bodice and skirt. The train of satin was confined to the shoulders with tiny sprays of orange blossoms. The long tulle veil fell gracefully from a coronet of real lace, pearls and orange blossoms. Her flowers were a shower bouquet of orchids and valley lilies.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Sheffield entertained with an elaborate reception. The bride's table was beautifully appointed and elegant in detail, the color note of lavender and pink being used effectively. Beautiful Ophelia roses and valley lilies in a handsome silver basket formed the central decoration of the table, encircled by silver candlesticks holding pink unshaded tapers, and alternating with silver compotes of pink and lavender mints.

Miss Hulet Humber and Miss Sara Oliver served at the bride's table, and serving at the reception were Misses Jean Curtis, Florence Fort, Cordelia Hooks, Chloé Davenport, Virginia Davenport, Martha English, Elizabeth Andrews, Harriet Rylander, Mary Harris, Margery Chazill and Martha Duncan.

Mrs. Sheffield, mother of the bride, was lovely in French blue georgette, elaborately embroidered in crystal beads, her corsage bouquet was Ophelia roses and valley lilies. Mrs. Frank Lanier, mother of the groom, wore a handsome gown of white chiffon velvet and completing her costume was a corsage of valley lilies and orchids.

Wedding Journey.
During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Lanier left for a wedding journey of several weeks to Florida and on their return will be at home at the residence of their uncle, Congressman C. R. Crisp, on Taylor street. The bride's traveling costume was a smart model of brown charmeuse with linen collar and cuffs. Her wrap was a stunning short model of derise cloth in a blue and tan stripe. A modish hat of blue straw with tiny rhinestone ornaments in front completed the costume.

Among the out-of-town guests for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Clarence White, Clarence White, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Carson Callaway, of LaGrange; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rawson, Miss Martha Bell, Frank Harold, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. H. Cordial interest centers throughout the south and east in the announcement of the marriage of Miss Alma Higgins, of Atlanta, and William J. Ormsby, of New York, which was solemnized Tuesday, February 5, at St. Malachy's church in New York.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Edward Leonard and was witnessed by a small company of relatives and close friends. Mrs. Ormsby was visiting relatives in New York at the time of the marriage.

Mrs. Ormsby is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Higgins, of Ansley Park, and possesses much charm and culture. She has been a most devoted missionary in the last time this lecture is given in Atlanta before Miss Bryan sails for China to resume her missionary work.

A most cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend the women and children of the community, and the members of the Catherine Bryan Circle are especially urged to attend.

Noted Missionary Will Give Lecture On Work in China

Miss Catherine Bryan will give an illustrated lecture on China Monday afternoon, February 11, at 3 o'clock at the West End Baptist church, under the auspices of the Woman's auxiliary of the church. Miss Bryan is a most gifted speaker, and this lecture on her work as a missionary in China is most interesting and instructive. As this will probably be the last time this lecture is given in Atlanta before Miss Bryan sails for China to resume her missionary work.

Hour Changed For Appearance of Flonzaley Quartet

Because it has been found impossible for the Flonzaley quartet to reach Atlanta in time for the afternoon concert which was announced for Saturday afternoon, the time has been changed to 8:30 in the evening, and all holders of season tickets to the concert which was announced for Saturday, in which the concert is included, are asked to make special note of the change.

The recital, which is to bring the series to a close for this season, is to be held in the auditorium of the chamber music hall in the country. It is expected that every seat in the house will be sold before the hour for the beginning of the concert.

The quartet is at present on a tour of Florida cities, and they will appear in Jacksonville on Friday evening. All trains leaving for Atlanta depart before the close of the concert, which has made it impossible for the artists to reach Atlanta before the early evening Saturday.

Study Class Will Meet.

The study class, which meets Thursday afternoons in the assembly room of the Carnegie library under the direction of Mrs. Elizabeth King, has combined the two sessions formerly held and in the future will open at 3 o'clock. "Affirmations and Denials" and the "Place of the Seven in the Evolution of Consciousness" and also the "Science of the Breath" will be the subjects for this week's study.

Mrs. Harvey L. Parry Attends Conference Of Scout Leaders

Mrs. Harvey L. Parry, director of the Girl Scouts of Atlanta, has returned from Nashville, Tenn., where she attended the southern education conference of Girl Scout leaders, held at George Peabody college for leaders, under the direction of Dr. Elizabeth Kemper Adams, national education secretary.

The conference was opened by Dr. Bruce B. Payne, president of Peabody college, who in a gracious speech of welcome, extended all the courtesies and facilities of the college to the Girl Scout leaders, who were gathered together from all over the south. Instructors and students of the physical education department attended all the sessions of the conference.

Many prominent speakers were on the program, including Dr. Van B. Kirkland, of Vanderbilt university; Dr. Rufus Weaver, of Mercer university; Dr. A. D. Browne, of Peabody college; Dr. B. B. Robinson, of the national committee for mental hygiene; Miss Cora L. Harris, of the American Child Health association.

The education conference is the first of its kind to be held in the south, scouting being less advanced in this section than in the north and east. During 1923, however, the southern states made greater advance in scouting for girls than any other part of the country, registering a larger per cent of the 44,000 increased membership on the national roll. The total total of Girl Scouts in the United States is 300,000.

The movement for girls started in England and has extended to all the nine foreign countries. The Girl Scout program was written by the author of the Boy Scout program, Sir Robert Baden-Powell, supervised by his wife and his sister. The entire program of the two branches is the same: "Do a good turn daily." "Be prepared." The program of activities differs in that the girls are prepared for home service while the boys are prepared for community service. Both branches of the scout movement put emphasis on health and wholesome recreation.

Pink unshaded tapers burned in silver candlesticks and the daintily embossed mints and confections further developed the color note.

SICK WOMAN MADE HAPPY

Entirely Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mart, Texas.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to build me up as I was all run down, nervous and sick. I ached and hurt all over so that I was often compelled to go to bed, and I had to have most of my work done. No medicine seemed to help me until one of my neighbors who was taking the Vegetable Compound insisted on my trying a bottle of it. The medicine helped me from the first, and the best of all is that I can even sew again without that awful, nervous feeling I was used to having. And I used to take crying spells, with such a blue feeling that I cannot explain. Now all that has left me. I feel so cheerful, and I have gained in weight, sleep well and eat hearty. Oh! I wish I had words to express what this medicine has done for me! I am a housekeeper and do every thing from the sewing to the washing now and it doesn't hurt me. You may use my letter in any way you wish. I will be glad to help any suffering woman to the road of health and happiness."—Mrs. F. F. BRANNON, 404 Travis Ave., Mart, Texas.

The Great Moment

BY ELINOR GLYN

His hesitation was gone now. Love was the arbiter; there was no more question of a fair game. If Eustace meant nothing to her, why should she be tied to him? That was an unfair game.

He put out his strong hand and touched her little, cold, holding her hunting crop.

"Nadine... I love you," he cried, and would have taken her in his arms.

A hundred yards down in the open space the two quiet horses waited patiently.

But what was that stealthy, sinuous, gliding thing which suddenly began gliding towards them from the sage brush?

Their eyes started from their heads in terror, and with wild snorts they broke away and galloped towards the path.

Nadine felt that everything in her was melting and that her whole being was merged in Bayard's; but before she could answer him or his lips meet hers in a fond kiss, they both heard the horses move, and started.

They stood upright, Bayard knew that the situation brooked no delay; he released Nadine and bounded down the crags in the vain attempt to head the animals at the turn, and as he crossed the sage brush, unseen by either of them, the great snake struck at him; but he had passed beyond its range.

The serious question of what was happening did not present itself to Nadine; she was annoyed that anything should have interrupted the divine moment of her life, but this was only another phase of the perfect day's adventure, and she prepared to descend and help in the chase. The snake was coiled again, its cunning head raised and alert.

Nadine had taken off one of her gloves in her excitement, and now she paused a moment, Bayard was calling to her:

"They have gone past the turn; we will never catch them now. It looks like a long hike for us," and he started to come back to her.

She laughed gaily and waved her glove at him, never seeing that death was very near, ready to strike.

The glove slipped out of her hand, and fell sharply against the great coiled reptile at her feet.

With eyes still fixed upon Bayard, she bent to pick it up, when, with a hideous rattle, the serpent raised itself and buried its fangs in her left shoulder.

She started with a agonized shriek, and the snake, having spent its venom, undulated away among the grey rocks before Bayard could reach the spot.

Frightful horror convulsed him when he realized what had occurred, and he covered the ground between them with great strides. Nadine was in an agony of terror and pain. She vaguely knew that soon she might have to die—and she was very sweet.

But Bayard never lost his head. He put his arms around her and tore her coat off, then the sleeve from her blouse—and there were two ominous purple marks. The place had not yet had time to swell. Not a moment was to be lost.

While he held the terrified girl firmly with one arm to prevent her struggling, he found his knife with the other hand, and opened it with his teeth.

Her agonized eyes watched him. When she saw what he meant to do, she screamed, and unconsciously struggled frantically to get free.

She was down to primitive instincts now, all civilized training had fallen from her blouse—and there were two ominous purple marks. The place had not yet had time to swell. Not a moment was to be lost.

With a cry of grief and misery, Bayard held her passionately to his heart.

CHAPTER XIII

When seven o'clock came, and Sadie Bronson and Eustace rode up to the hotel door at Gold Rock, without the other two young people, Sir Edward, who had arrived half an hour before, and was smoking on the veranda with Mr. Bronson and some of the mine officials, rose and came towards them. He was annoyed. This was not a suitable pairing of the quartette, and Eustace had no right to have let it come about.

Sadie, as usual, smoothed the situation. "We were racing back, and Nadine was ahead, and must have taken the wrong turn, Sir Edward, because Mr. Delaval tore after her—I suppose, to point it out to her—and we missed them. We thought we should have found them here before us."

Sir Edward could not express his displeasure in words but Eustace felt that he was very angry, and like all weak natures, knowing himself to be in the wrong, he blamed others.

"Nadine would not keep alongside of any of us," he said shortly. "To go as fast as she could was all that concerned her."

And having assisted Sadie to dismount, he entered the hotel, and went up to his room to change.

Sadie was radiant. She had "brought Eustace along" as she expressed it to herself, and had made him feel that she was the only companion who would not bore him. The flirtation was no longer tentative, but a clear fact. She stayed on the veranda, saying delightful things to the irate parent of Nadine, until she had soothed him, rocking herself to and fro in one of the several rocking chairs.

"They'll be here in a minute, of course; nothing could happen to them, and Mr. Delaval knows the way."

Miss Bronson came out of the door, knitting in hand. She looked rocking chairs—most undignified seats, she considered them.

And when Miss Bronson offered her one, she bit her head off. "The worthy Blenkensop was so unkindly by Nadine's non-appearance; she had some uncomfortable feeling that it was not accidental. She knew the signs of the times and that Sir Edward was very annoyed.

Half an hour passed—Sadie kept in the conversation even—and then she went into the hotel.

"I suppose we'll have supper about eight-thirty," she said, kissing her hand to her father. Eustace had not appeared.

Quarter to nine came before she descended again, and the party were assembled waiting on the veranda—very hungry and impatient. The head mining officials and the sheriff were of the party.

The culprits had not put in appearance. Sir Edward was now very anxious. He knew Nadine's awe of him would never allow her to stay behind deliberately like this; something must have happened to them. The different people all said the things that people do say under such circumstances, and one mine manager vouchsafed the explanation that:

"Once you got off the track you need a compass to land you anywhere."

Blenkensop was so inwardly agitated that her knitting needles absolutely flew in and out as she made her body still and bolt upright.

"Ought not we to go and look for them?" Eustace suggested half-heartedly. He was convinced that no matter what had occurred, Bayard Delaval was quite capable of taking care of a woman, and he had a shrewd suspicion that Nadine would enjoy an adventure with him.

As they stood there peering into the darkness which comes so suddenly in those western climes, the sound of horses trotting could be heard in the distance, and the tension upon Sir Edward's face relaxed a little.

Yes, that Nadine would enjoy an adventure with him. As they stood there peering into the darkness which comes so suddenly in those western climes, the sound of horses trotting could be heard in the distance, and the tension upon Sir Edward's face relaxed a little.

The men made a rush across the dusty ground just as the man who attended to them caught their dragging and broken bridles.

No, there were no marks of an accident; the horses had not fallen. Everything pointed to the riders' having dismounted, and that then the horses had broken away.

Blank looks came on to faces, and then one jolly engineer laughed.

"Guess they stopped off to look at the sunset," he said, "and it'll be a long hike back."

Anger now had quenched anxiety in Sir Edward, and even Eustace felt aggrieved. His fiancée had no business to take interests in sunsets; it was most un ladylike to make scandals in this way.

And as quickly as possible two motors were brought round, and when they had their coats, he and Eustace got into one of them with a driver who knew the way, while two mine officials started in the second one towards the only other possible path that came in from the direction of the mine.

Sir Edward's face was set in a mask of stone. He was too reserved to vent his fury upon Eustace, whom he felt was partly to blame, because if he had shown proper attention to his fiancée she would not have had the opportunity to dismount with such grace, feeling that some climax must occur.

Unless Nadine had the most perfectly proper explanation to offer, Eustace felt his dignity would not permit him to go on with the affair. He did not analyze his motives, or he would have discovered that inclination would prompt him to catch at any straw to be free.

Sir Edward was saying to himself that from now onward until her marriage Nadine should not leave his own or Miss Blenkensop's side, and that the marriage should take place the moment they returned to England, which would be within a month. They drove back all the weary miles to the mine.

Not a trace of the pair could be found. The sleepy watchman had seen nothing, and heard nothing. So at about midnight they turned back again, Sir Edward a prey to alternate anger and fear.

When they got to the hotel once more the other motor had returned after a fruitless search.

Almost wild with anxiety now, Sir Edward insisted upon starting out again. There must be some branch path; they would follow every one.

Eustace's ill temper increased with every mile. He felt that he hated Nadine.

They reached the mine for the second time about three o'clock, and here a watchman, more awake than his mates, suggested that about a mile down the track there was a turn-off, concealed by a great rock, which they would not be likely to notice in the dark, but which led to a hidden path which eventually got back to the camp.

So the two weary men entered the motor once more, and proceeded very slowly, examining every yard of the way; they were too anxious to remember how hungry they were!

At last, after diligent search, they came to what appeared to be the longed for turn, and they went along it on an impossible road.

After about half an hour's creeping over stones and in ruts, just when the eastern sky had begun to change, Sir Edward, peering from one side, called a halt.

There was a light not far away up the mountain side. Could they be there? But in any case perhaps some information might be obtained about them. Both men got out quickly, and told the driver to wait for them there.

But what was that sound which suddenly met their ears, floating across to them in the still air? Surely it was weird Russian music? Sir Edward held his breath, for now he could distinguish the tune. Some one, or a gramophone, was playing "The Red Sarafane."

"My God! Eustace, do you hear that?" he said in a broken voice. "Come on."

CHAPTER XIV

Was she to die, this beloved creature, just when it seemed that their love would burst all bonds and declare itself?

No!—not if human resource and will could save her.

Bayard looked about wildly for a second, but he knew that no help would come from outside. It was a million to one that anyone would ever pass that way by chance.

There to the north, farther up the mountain, on the other side of the path, his little shack could just be seen—a tiny shanty of rough boards.

He lifted his unconscious burden high, she seemed as light as a baby to the big strong man, and soon he was striding up the hill with her, and at last he reached the shanty and pushed open the door.

It was just a boarded room, with an old wooden bed in one corner with some dark looking blankets. Up on the shelves the rough beams made, there were specimens of quartz in bags, waiting to be tested, and a few implements and a pair of scales were on the big wooden writing table, with a lamp upon it; there was another table at the other side, a couple of the most primitive chairs stood about, a box for a washing stand, a small cupboard, and a brand-new Victrola, with a pile of records, standing on another box completed the furniture.

Bayard put his precious bundle tenderly down on the bed, then he rapidly went to the cupboard and got out a glass and a bottle of whisky—real Scotch, in spite of prohibition! The bottle was about three-quarters full. He filled the tumbler to the brim, and took it over to the bed.

Nadine lay like a log. He raised her in his arms gently and forced the glass between her lips. It almost seemed as if her touch revived her, for her eyes opened for a moment, and he poured some of the spirit down her throat.

The choking completely awoke her. "You must drink this," he said sternly. The danger to her permitted of no delay for persuasion. The gipsy called upon it; there was another part of her spirit which seemed conscious, and it immediately recognized a master, and swallowed the whisky in gulps.

If she hesitated for a moment, Bayard spoke again with a tone of firm authority. He did not stop until she had taken the whole big tumblerful. Then he let her lie back on the pillow, and he covered her up with the coarse brown blankets. If he had been in time he believed she would now be saved; the great quantity of whisky would counteract the poison, as every miner knew. But had he been in time?

Nadine seemed to fall in to a semi-conscious torpor; but when he felt her pulse, her heart was beating a little more strongly. So he could leave her for a moment to prepare to wash the wound.

He poured more whisky into some water, and then very tenderly bathed the place, putting on a bandage of a torn-up handkerchief as well as he could. She let him do as he liked, with her eyes half closed and breathing heavily.
